Demerit System in Chaos

City Already Past Road Death Record

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

This year could be the worst ever for traffic fatalities in the greater Victoria area leading to calls for a heavy enforcement program.

Already 35 people have died in road mishaps, four more than in all of 1973.

Police officials fear the number will climb even higher as the dark nights of winter close in, a time generally fraught with serious motor vehicle accidents.

Only Oak Bay has been fatality free — an enviable record that dates back to July, 1970.

In all other muncipalities the number of fatalities has either reached or exceeded the 1973 figures.

Saanich has had 10 fatalities so far, up two for the whole of last year. Sidney, with five, is also up two.

Victoria, with nine, Colwood, with seven, Sooke, with two, and Esquimalt and Central Saanich each with one, are all the same as 1973 year-end tallies in their respective areas.

Traffic experts can offer no definitive explanation for the startling increase in road deaths.

However, police officials interviewed Tuesday clearly felt there has been a deterioration in the respect for safe driving in recent years.

They cited public apathy, indifference and a total disdain for traffic regulations as principle factors in the decline.

The laws are not just being infringed either, they are being "flagrantly abused" and "wilfully disobeyed," Colwood RCMP Cpl. Lance Bailey said.

"A voluntary compliance of the laws just doesn't occur," he said.

A traffic expert with 14 years experience, Bailey considers the major causes of accidents, speeding and following too close.

But traffic deaths nearly always show alcohol involved somewhere, he said. There is evidence of alcohol in six of this year's seven fatalities in the Colwood area.

The deaths in Saanich have perplexed police officials. All have occurred in good weather, on dry roads, under what could be considered ideal driving conditions.

How do they happen then?

The majority can be attributed to excessive speed, Insp. Ted Owens said.

Owens, who has just returned from a motor trip to Alberta, said he sees "more crazy things happening on the roads in Victoria than any of the other places I visited."

"We seem to have a lackadaisical type of driver here. The people just don't seem to

An avalanche of driver's licence suspensions is creating serious problems for the B.C. Motor Vehicle branch.

"We just can't cope with the workload," Adolphe Repasse, supervisor of driver safety and improvement said in an interview Tuesday. "The situation is really getting out of hand.

"Unless we make some drastic changes I don't know what we are going to do.

"I could stand at least 10 additional staff to cope with the suspension picture we have now."

Some suspensions are taking as long as a year to process, he said. The present backlog runs between 2,000 and 3,000.

"We have files piled up around us like cord wood.

"It's a very serious situation. If we want to keep on with the program we are going to have to get more staff."

Repasse isn't the only one disturbed by the situation. Saanich police Insp. Ted Owens had some hard hitting comments of his own.

"Suspension has become a joke," he said. "We've had people with 60 and 70 demerit points and still driving. They just laugh at us.

"A senior RCMP official told me of a person in Vancouver who had 60 demerit points and was bragging about it.

"Yet nothing was happening to him.

"Unless people know there is action at the end of the line . . . the penalty of suspension is entirely lost."

At present the driver's licence suspension division has a staff of 28 typists, clerks and analysts. In addition there are 70 examiners handling outside interviews around the province.

Repasse estimated his staff will process about 250,000 records of convictions and traffic violation reports as well as more than 20,000 notices of intent and actual suspensions this year.

The figures have been soaring each year.

He said besides the critical staff shortage part of the problem was the Motor Vehicle Act which details how suspensions must be processed.

Suspensions may be handed down by a judge and they take effect immediately.

However if the judge doesn't suspend — and relatively few do according to Repasse — then it's up to the Motor Vehicle Branch.

Only on drinking driving offences is suspension mandatory — one month for first offenders, six months for repeaters.

"But," said Repasse, "just because it's mandatory doesn't mean it is automatic."

It can take from three weeks to three months before the suspension order is finally made, and in that time the convicted drinking driver can drive with impunity.

The delays start at the police station, he said. By law

CALLEY

Judge Frees Calley

Times News Services

COLUMBUS, Ga. — A judge, citing a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling dealing with former president Nixon and the Watergate tapes, today overturned the My Lai murder conviction of former army Lieut. William Calley.

He ordered Calley freed immediately.

Judge J. Robert Elliott overturned Calley's conviction for the murder of 22 civilians in the hamlet of My Lai on the specific grounds of massive pretrial publicity, denial of Calley's rights to confront unfriendly witnesses and improperly-drawn charges.

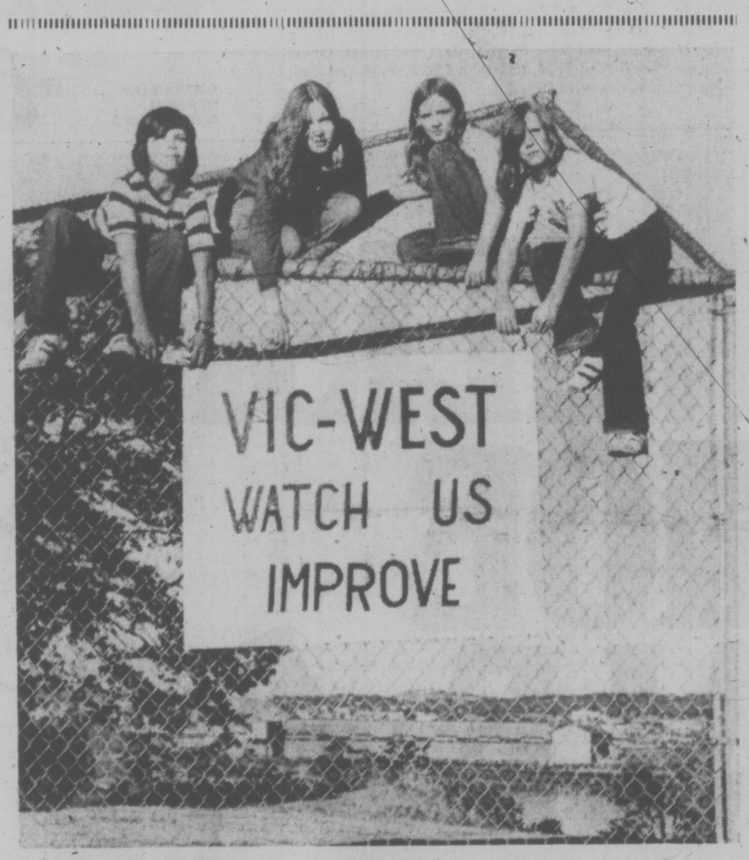
But Elliott said the Supreme Court, in ruling on the Watergate tapes, had, in effect, decided the Calley affair.

He noted that the court held that Nixon had to turn over the Watergate tapes, but that a committee of the House of Representatives that investigated the My Lai case had refused to turn over its transcript to Calley's defence lawyers.

Army attorneys, however, are expected to appeal the order immediately, and Elliott's ruling does not necessarily mean that Calley will be set free.

Calley is being held at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where he was taken after the army succeeded in having his bail revoked. Elliott earlier had set Calley free on bail after Calley took his case to the civilian courts, having exhausted his appeals before military tribunals.

Calley was sentenced to life imprisonment March 29, 1971, by a court-martial board. His sentence was reduced to 20 years by a military appeals board and then to 10 by Army Secretary Howard Callaway.



Signs of Vic West Pride

In an effort to promote community pride, Vic West is erecting "Vic West — Watch Us Improve" signs on all roads leading into the community.

The idea came out of the recent survey taken in conjunction with the Neighborhood Improvement Program. Vic West and James Bay are to share in $2 million in funds for improvement programs.

The idea was mentioned in August and this month the signs began appearing. Helping to erect this sign are from left: Trevor Tweedie, and Elaine, Gemma and Steven Agnew.

By ANDRE OUIMET

OTTAWA — Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson was stumped Tuesday at a news conference when asked to name a specific example of imaginative Canadian housing ideas he had referred to earlier.

The conference was held on the subject of Habitat, a United Nations conference on housing to be held in Vancouver in 1976, and Danson had emphasized that Canada already had examples of the type of housing ideas which would be discussed at Habitat.

"I'm on the spot," Danson admitted and deftly passed the question to his executive assistant, who snapped up to attention, and after a moment's hesitation suggested that an Urban Affairs official, sitting among the press people, could best answer.

"There are, unquestionably, a number of existing imaginative projects on housing in Canada," the official began, "but I would like a colleague of mine here to tell us of a particular project he has been working on himself."

The colleague reluctantly got up, cracked that "the buck stops here," and proceeded to describe what Canada had to offer in the way of imaginative housing ideas.

Project "Winter Warmth," he began, had evolved after studies by the Uban Affairs department had shown it would be difficult to move natives living in Northern settlements "to a middle-class house in middle class Toronto."

"The imaginative answer was to upgrade housing in the North—taking the Indian or Eskimo's home and providing it with a stove and insulation."

No other "imaginative" ideas were offered as examples of Canadian ingenuity and the news conference moved on to other subjects.

Mounties 'Infiltrated'

TORONTO (CP) — The RCMP fears that organized crime has infiltrated its security division, according to the Toronto Star.

In a copyright story from Ottawa, the newspaper quotes reliable sources as saying that this fear, plus reference to a clandestine operation by agents of United States military intelligence in Montreal, dominates a mass of top-secret information that may become public this week.

The Star says the sources claim the information is potentially dangerous to Canada and they are astonished that it may become public.

The documents are those filed with the federal Court of Appeal in a case involving an appeal by two former RCMP security agents against their dismissal last December. The court has ruled that the documents in the case of Don McCleery and Gilles Brunet are to be made available as evidence in the case.

The Star says that the best information available indicates evidence shortly to be released will show:

—The RCMP has grave fears that it has been infiltrated and perhaps used by organized crime, which in turn is moving into legitimate fields of business and industry as it has in the U.S.

—At least two officers of U.S. Military Intelligence were in Canada for a period of months, conducting clandestine operations on behalf of Washington with at least the tacit approval of the RCMP.

—Illegal wiretaps are used by the RCMP as a matter of course, and these infringe on a broad sector of society normally considered immune to invasions of privacy in a free society.

Nixon Has Lung Clot

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Richard Nixon has a blood clot in his right lung "which is a potentially dangerous situation," his doctor said today.

Dr. John C. Lungren said that the clot, which moved through blood vessels from Nixon's leg, was found through tests conducted by a specialist in nuclear medicine.

There was a good chance for Nixon to recover, but it would take some time, he added.

He revealed that he had suspected the lung clot since Sept. 11 when he visited Nixon while he was staying at the home of U.S. ambassador to Britain, Walter Annenberg, in Palm Springs.

Lungren said Nixon probably would be hospitalized at least until the middle or end of next week.

Exporter Bid for Eggs, CEMA Let Them Rot

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto exporter said Tuesday his order for 50 million eggs was rejected in April by the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) because the price offered was too low.

Andrew Tuval, president of Rexim International Ltd., a food broker, said he had the order, from one of Austria's largest food importers, signed in the Canadian Embassy in Vienna with the Canadian Trade Commission there as witnesses.

Tuval said the CEMA need not have wasted any of the 28 million eggs recently found rotting in storage areas if it had pushed European exports.

"But I saw no evidence the egg agency was interested."

Canadian eggs, he said, have better flavor, color and sanitary conditions than the East European eggs usually sold in Austria, which is a major importer of eggs. If the price had been right, a good market could have been developed, he added.

Rexim was developing the Austrian market with the help of the Ontario Egg Producers Marketing Board, with Rexim working on commission. Experimental air shipments of eggs to Vienna were started in late 1973 with the Ontario board's help.

But when the national egg surplus began to mount last spring, CEMA took over export responsibilities from the provincial boards along with responsibility for disposing of the surplus.

"We bowed out and turned Mr. Tuval and his order over to CEMA," Brian Ellsworth, manager of the Ontario board, said.

Rexim's offer to CEMA "was in the low range," recalled Henry Pauls, director of market development for the Ontario food council, a branch of the agriculture department.

"But the point is that every offer should have been looked

U.S. Banks Chop Their Prime Rate

NEW YORK (UPI) — Several major U.S. banks today lowered their prime interest rates from the record high of 12 per cent to 11¾, indicating a slight easing in the tight money situation imposed to control inflation. Morgan Guaranty Trust Co. of New York, was the first to make the move. Chase Manhattan of New York, the nation's third largest and a trend-setter in monetary affairs, quickly followed suit. The Texas Commerce Bank of Houston and Manufacturers Bank of Los Angeles also announced reductions.

Turner Budget By Nov. 15

OTTAWA (UPI)— Finance Minister John Turner said today he expects to bring down a new budget before November 15. Speaking to reporters after the first session of the Commonwealth Finance Ministers' conference here, Turner said the government intended to continue its discussions with the provinces over resource taxation before the budget is presented.

Israeli Planes Pound Lebanon

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli jets bombed and strafed Palestinian targets in southern Lebanon today less than seven hours before the start of Yom Kippur, holiest day of the Jewish calendar and anniversary of the 1973 Arab-Israeli war. Reports from Sidon, Lebanon, said no Palestinian guerrillas were killed or wounded in the raids, which followed similar attacks Tuesday, but plantations were destroyed and woods set ablaze.

Marguerite's Last Trip

Victorians who want to take a last "sentimental journey" aboard the doomed Princess Marguerite will have their final chance to do so on Saturday, when the CP vessel makes its last full run to Seattle and back.

Sunday's sailing will be a charter trip and the final sailing Monday will be strictly one-way, from Seattle to Victoria.

News of the service termination has been greeted with gloom and despondency by Victoria's tourist industry (see story page 13).

Free Enterprise Rallies Socreds

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS — Social Credit delegates left their policy think-tank Tuesday with a hefty bundle of resolutions re-affirming their allegiance to free enterprise in B.C.

Sixteen policy workshops had finished their deliberations in the morning and the remainder of the day was spent in a lengthy recital of the 63 pages of resolutions hammered out at the two-day session.

As the 200 delegates gathered to hear the results of their work, Socred leader Bill Bennett reminded them the resolutions are only one step in the process which will lead to a new Social Credit policy at the annual convention in Vancouver this November.

The workshop papers, prepared with the help of invited experts in various fields, will now go back to constituency associations for discussion in preparation for the November gathering.

But despite Bennett's cautioning, the delegates displayed obvious confidence in the success of their recommendations.

Their confidence and exuberance was heightened when party president Grace McCarthy read a telegram on the results of the first Socred door-knocking campaign in Cowichan-Malahat consituency.

"Out of 60 homes visited, 46

Just Too Many Volunteers

Police today had to turn away volunteers wanting to join in the search for two-year-old Yehudi Prior, lost in rugged terrain 10 miles south of Shawnigan Lake Monday.

"We don't want to end up having to hunt for volunteers who get lost in the bush," an RCMP spokesman said.

The search has entered its second day for the boy, only child of William and Ann Prior, both in their early 20s.

The boy apparently wandered off while the couple was picking berries about half a mile from their home, a rough cabin situated on land owned by MacMillan and Bloedel in a remote area north and west of the Port Renfrew Road. A logging road is the only access to the site.

RCMP in Shawnigan Lake said Prior notified them at 5 p.m. Monday that his son had disappeared about two hours earlier but thought he could find him himself.

"He wondered if someone — loggers or trail-bike riders — had reported seeing the child," the police spokesman said.

"We didn't hear from him again until the next morning when he came into our office to request assistance in a search."

About 20 searchers, including police and members of the Duncan volunteer search and rescue group combed a one square mile area Tuesday where the boy was last seen.

A tracking dog was brought in from Nanaimo Tuesday afternoon but failed to pick up any scent.

The search resumed at dawn today.

VANDALS HIT BEN GINTER

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) Vandals did an estimated $50,000 damage to the home of industrialist Ben Ginter during the weekend.

A police spokesman said the size of footprints indicated children were responsible.

Every room in the 9,000-square-foot mansion was ransacked, windows were smashed and upholstery was slashed.

memberships were taken," she said, as the audience gasped and then clapped.

The resolutions displayed one prominent theme — get the government out of the private sector and instead provide incentives to private enterprise.

All major workshops produced similar recommendations:

—in mining: create tenure and tax incentives to encourage the commitment of capital for mine development;

—in energy: ensure a pricing system in natural gas that will provide incentives to producers to intensify exploration programs;

—in housing: provide the climate and the incentives to allow private enterprise to alleviate the housing crisis;

—in travel industry: carry out a program of financial assistance in the form of long-term, low interest loans for the expansion and modernization of tourist facilities;

—in forestry: make loans available to Canadian-owned forest companies with preferred rates for smaller businesses;

—in parks and recreation: provide long run, low cost financing to the private sector for the development of campsites and trailer park facilities;

—in finance: encourage capital investment by repealing the Corporation Capital Tax Act.

The finance workshop also endorsed a resolution that "a program must be devised to dissolve Crown corporations participating in the private sector of industry, while at the same time steps are taken to bring renewed vigor and competition to industry."

The resolution was backed by other workshop groups and the delegates cheered when the forest group recommended the government "dispose of all its forest products assets in Crown corporations as soon as feasible."

The obvious conclusion of the mining group was that NDP policy has been "punitive and ill-advised" and the Socreds should wipe out all the new royalty legislation and replace it with "a fair tax on profits."

Several groups tussled with NDP's most controversial legislation — the Land Commission Act — and they all came out against total repeal of the bill.

A revised Land Commission Act, they agreed, should somehow give regional governments more say in land control decisions, the land commission less power and still protect farmland in the province.

The consumer affairs workshop enjoyed a lengthy debate of the Insurance Corporation and came up with resolutions to revamp the entire ICBC structure.

The government should not be in the general insurance field, it decided, and private companies should be allowed to compete with Autoplan.

If Autoplan was forced to operate in competition against other firms, the government would not be allowed to subsidize the insurance and ICBC would not be able to operate to a loss, said the group.

Drivers' certificates should be discontinued and regular insurance premiums should include individual risk factors now covered by the certificates.

Finally the group recommended an independent insurance commission be set up to regulate all insurance in the province.

Other policy groups presented a wide-range of different policy suggestions:

Municipal affairs reiterated a long-standing municipal plea for "an equitable per capita grant base rate be established and adjusted annually on percentage basis to the annual gross provincial revenue."

They urged Crown corporations and the government to pay full taxes on their land holdings and they recommended that homeowners not be punished with higher tax assessments every time they improve or beautify their homes.

The energy workshop called for establishment of an energy resource and conservation board "to deal with all aspects of energy production, supply, allocation and conservation" in B.C.

B.C. Hydro should hold public hearings, they said, before approval of rate increases or undertakings which require large capital expenditures.

The health delegates recommended all of the NDP's newly-created community resource boards be disbanded and volunteer organizations providing community services be reinstated.

A number of constituency recommendations were rejected by the labor group which agreed to the concept of a union shop but not the closed shop.

Government contracts should be invited from both union and non-union companies, it decided, because "it is up to unions, not governments, to organize workers."

all traffic violation reports have to be kept by police for a minimum of seven days in the event the convicted person wishes to appeal the sentence or dispute the charge. Most police offices keep the reports for at least nine days.

"By the time the reports reach us in the mail almost two weeks have passed," he said.

The branch issues the suspension order, mails it back to the police who then have to go out and find the person, serve him the papers and retrieve his licence.

In other cases where the driver has accumulated 10 or more demerit points and thus earned a candidacy for suspension, a more convoluted route must be followed.

At the onset there is a clerical snag: every traffic violation report must be matched with the driver's record.

Once a candidate for suspension has been located in the maze of files the branch issues a notice of intent to suspend. The driver is given 15 days to "make a submission" in response.

"We have to extend the date because of delays in mailing," Repasse said. "And sometimes the person has moved so we have to start writing all over the place to try to contact him again."

When and if the submission is returned the branch reviews the case, decides on what to do, and sends out a final notice.

If the person doesn't like the decision he can make another submission by legal counsel, letter, or personal appearance.

And if he is still unhappy he can take the case to County Court and appeal the ruling before a judge.

"It can take up to a year . . . and all the while the person is driving his car," Repasse said.

"Repercussions from adjudication and the mechanics of sending out notices and handling further interviews is causing no end of trouble.

"We are bending over backwards to help the guy who caused the problem in the first place."

Greeks to Vote

ATHENS (UPI) — Premier Constantine Caramanlis has decided to call Greece's voters to the polls in November for the country's first national elections in 10 years, diplomatic sources said today.

SMALLER JAILS REQUESTED

HARRISON HOT SPRNGS — Decentralization of B.C.'s prison system into smaller, local prisons in or near centres of population was recommended to the Social Credit policy conference here Tuesday.

A group of Socred members and outside "resource personnel" in a "law and the people" workshop agreed the party should adopt as its policy a program whereby prisoners undergoing short terms of imprisonment could serve their time in small, local prisons.

With the decentralization would come a program enabling prisoners "to make amends in practical ways to their victims, or to the community in which they live."

The law workshop, headed by Vancouver lawyer Allan McEachern, presented the conference membership with a lengthy list of resolutions for their consideration as party policy.

It recommended:

—Enactment of a provincial bill of rights, modelled on the federal bill;

—A system of allowing the legal profession to persue all legislation before it is enacted "to miminize legislative error;"

—Highway traffic laws be more vigorously enforced by providing more police for patrol duty;

—The Succession Duty Act and Gift Tax Act be repealed;

—"If the news media violate the laws of libel or slander, that the cases be heard more expeditiously and that the damages for such violations be more substantial."

One resolution said the Socreds recognize the serious complaints of B.C.'s native people and recommend "an in depth study be made of the problems facing the Indian people in order to justly and fairly resolve the grievances of Indian people within the province."

Aussies Devalue, Float Dollar

CANBERRA (AP) — The Australian dollar was devalued by 12 per cent today and no longer will be tied to the United States dollar, Prime Minister Gough Whitlam announced.

He said that initially under the new arrangement the Australian dollar would be worth $1.3060 U.S., compared with $1.4870 before the devaluation.

care what happens to anybody, let alone themselves."

The incidence of serious accidents has increased despite stricter enforcement.

All municipalities report from a moderate to heavy increase in number of hazardous driving violation offences in their areas.

Saanich issued 3,362 tickets in the first six months of this year, compared to 4,718 for all of 1973.

In Colwood, there were 2,143 tickets issued to the end of August, compared to 1,461 over the same period last year.

"My personal opinion is we need a heavy, strict enforcement program in force throughout the district," Owens said.

"But we have to have the backing of the motor vehicle branch.

"We have to get the cases into the court faster and have got to suspend licences and mean it.

"In some cases I feel the car should be seized for 30 or 60 days and there should be the authority under the act to do so.

"Why, it's ridiculous but there is more power under the game and liquor act to impound cars of law-breakers."

But Insp. James Smith of Victoria police expressed mixed feelings about stiffer penalties.

"Maybe we need to take that kind of action . . . but how do you stop people breaking the law.

"Is it education? Is it advertising? Or what? Frankly I just don't have the answers. I wish I did."

Egg Bid Ingored

at in the light of the surplus around," Pauls said. "CEMA wouldn't even come up with a counter-offer."

Rexim's offer to CEMA was 53 cents a dozen, about halfway between prices paid by the board in April to egg farmers — who were getting 66 cents a dozen for Grade A large eggs — and 81.5 cents a dozen being charged to stores for graded, washed and packaged eggs.

"We felt the price was workable and we could have come to some agreement," Tuval said. "We asked for a counter-offer from CEMA, but it never came."

A CEMA spokesman said Tuesday it was the first time the current CEMA administration heard of the Rexim case. CEMA directors set up a management committee of three people in July to replace Ed Morgan, manager of the British Columbia Egg Board who was on loan to CEMA for six months.

Meanwhile, the Ontario Egg Producers Marketing Board announced at a news conference Tuesday that Ontario egg producers are going to cut their flocks by another 500,000 birds during the next few weeks to reduce overproduction. Ontario farms now have nine million hens, down three million from the number they had when the board was set up two years ago.

The board also said egg prices will rise as the prospect of competition from the United States diminishes due to an egg shortage there in the low-supply, high-price phase of their price cycle.

And in British Columbia, Mainland voted unanimously Tuesday to withhold their egg producers in the Lower weekly levies from CEMA until the national egg scheme is operating smoothly.

Many of the 150 producers at the monthly meeting of the British Columbia Egg Producers' Association said the move could jeopardize the future of CEMA.

The producers complained that CEMA is not operating as originally envisioned noting national production quotas being based on the availability of laying chickens rather than being geared to market demand.

The B.C. Producers' levy amounts to about $42,000 a week on CEMA quota eggs and sometimes as high as $140,000 a week with extra charges which involve some excess quota eggs.

Fred Krahn, a member of the B.C. board, said that so far $361,000 has been paid to CEMA and the national agency gives B.C. producers at least half a million dollars.

the weather

The vestige of a bygone summer lingers as several localities throughout B.C. again reported record maximum temperatures Tuesday. Readings into the upper eighties were not uncommon in southwestern portions of the province while stations in the interior recorded mid seventy maximum. A moderating trend is in sight however as a weak Pacific frontal system moves southward through the province. Cloud and shower activity over northern coastal areas will taper off slightly this evening as the front continues its trek southward. Only cloud and the odd shower will accompany the system through the interior but a noticeable drop in daytime temperatures will be detected Thursday. Southern coastal sections will experience cloudy periods Thursday with maximums some 5 to 10 degrees cooler. A few gusty winds can also be expected as the front passes through.

N-Spread Peril Relayed to UN

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada, warning of a growing threat of nuclear catastrophe, called upon all countries today to place under international supervision the stock of nuclear missile material they now hold for peaceful purposes.

External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen urged the General Assembly to seek broad international measures to halt both the multiplication and the wider dissemination of nuclear explosive devices and check the spread of nuclear weapons technology.

Delivering Canada's annual policy statement in the assembly's general debate, he warned:

"If we are to avoid a nuclear catastrophe we must accept that there are practical limits to the application of the principle of non-discrimination.

"My government urged the international community to accept the obligation not to contribute to the uncontrolled spread of nuclear explosive capacity and the safeguards required to ensure compliance with that obligation."

He suggested international supervision of missile material is the best means available for the international community to be assured of each state's peaceful intentions.

For its part, Canada intended "to satisfy itself that any country using Canadian-supplied nuclear technology or material will be subject to binding obligations so that the technology or material will not be used in the fabrication of nuclear explosive devices for whatever purpose."

Turning to UN peacekeeping operations, MacEachen said new principles and techniques must be found to strengthen those operations if their usefulness was to be maintained and expanded.

The machinery is at hand under the Charter to ensure the effective United Nations response to future peacekeeping needs."

He warned that governments will be less willing to contribute troops to such operations unless peacekeeping activity is accompanied by a parallel effort on the political level to convert a temporary peace "into something more durable."

Canadians supported peacekeeping efforts but were concerned because they "often seem to do no more than perpetuate an uneasy status quo."

Thrill-Kill Spree Claimed

100 MILE HOUSE (CP) — The head of a 10-man murder investigation team says a murder epidemic is sweeping the province because girls persist in hitch-hiking.

Staff Sergeant Fred Bodnaruk, head of the team investigating the murder of 16-year-old Colleen MacMillan of Lac La Hache, says hitch-hiking girls are an easy target for deranged people.

He does not like seeing publicity on recent murders in British Columbia for fear it encourages other assaults but "we have to seek aid from the public in helping to stop them," he said.

He said the office of the attorney general might be annoyed, but he believes some legislation is necessary to stop hitch-hiking.

The federal government seems to be sanctioning hitch-hiking with its "Go See Canada" program, said Sgt. Bodnaruk. Who added he would like to see a government-sponsored public information program to tell people about hitch-hiking dangers.

Barrett's Lunch Menu Didn't Feature Grits

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Barrett and provincial opposition members of parliament met Tuesday and blasted the Federal government on a number of issues.

Missing from Barrett's Federal-Provincial luncheon, however, were all of British Columbia's eight Liberal MPs.

Ten Conservative MPs and both New Democratic Party MPs joined Barrett and several members o fhis cabinet in condemning the Trudeau government for:

—Lack of serious efforts to stop the shipping of Alaska oil down the B.C. coast to Puget Sound;

—Failure to co-operate in planning and funding an integrated Lower Mainland rapid transit system;

—Failure to act decisively in the month old grain shipping strike;

—Inadequate federal aid in providing chronic care hospital facilities.

The Conservatives also criticized the provincial government, especially for the $100 million overrun in Human resources Minister Norm Levi's department.

Barrett said that although some of the department's program costs had been underestimated, it would not push B.C. into deficit financing.

Mincome, pharmacare, expansion of chronic care and extra aid for underprivileged children were all new programs, and "we didn't know their cost," he said.

Questioned about how many unemployed employables there are on welfare in B.C., Levi admitted that about 15 per cent are in that category, receiving about $23 million a year.

He added that he would welcome ideas on how to remove them from welfare lists without endangering those unable to work.

Barrett said he was "bitterly disappointed" that no Liberals attended the lunchtime discussions, saying the intent was to help inform the federal government on B.C. needs and problems.

Ottawa now seems to have accepted as inevitable the coastal tanker transport of Alaska oil, yet has ignored repeated requests for information on facilities available to combat a major oil spill, he said.

Barrett said he has hired an environmental research firm to prepare a report on what could be done if a large spill occurs, and expects the report to be completed by the middle of October.

B.C. Ferries will lose about $20 million this year, he predicted.

Arabs Plot Oil Strategy

Times News Services

Arab and South American backlash against U.S. demands for a rollback in world oil prices is growing.

Persian Gulf foreign ministers in New York for a UN General Assembly meeting huddle today in closed session to map strategy to counter the strongly-worded message to them from President Ford on Monday.

Venezuelan President Carlos Perez today claimed that in the past oil-consuming nations "paid outrageously low prices for raw materials and then sold finished products at ever-higher prices."

In a letter to Ford which appeared as a full-page ad in today's New York Times, he said this disparity has caused "a constant and growing outflow of capital and impoverishment of our countries."

He demanded an immediate end to "economic totalitarianism."

In Vienna, a spokesman for the Organization of Petroleum Producing Countries claimed that inflation did not begin with boosted crude oil prices.

"Rather it was because of inflation that prices had to be increased," he said. "However high crude oil prices are, they account for no more than one or two per cent of world-wide inflation.

Kuwait's Oil Minister Abdul Atiki, meanwhile, laughed at a 12-nation agreement to share oil reserves, saying it was "an unlucky agreement likely to lead to sheer confusion."

Meanwhile, the Globe and Mail says Canada's export charge on crude oil sold to the United States is expected to go up 35 cents or more a barrel as early as November because of crude oil price increases from the Middle East.

The Toronto newspaper quotes federal government sources as saying the oil price increase of 33 cents a barrel announced by the Petroleum Export Countries should hit Canadian importers of oil for Eastern Canada Oct. 1.

This would make affected importers eligible for 33-cent-a-barrel compensation under the East Coast oil subsidy program and in turn make a similar increase in Ottawa's export charge of western oil necessary, the newspaper adds.

Lukewarm Logic at the Hot Springs

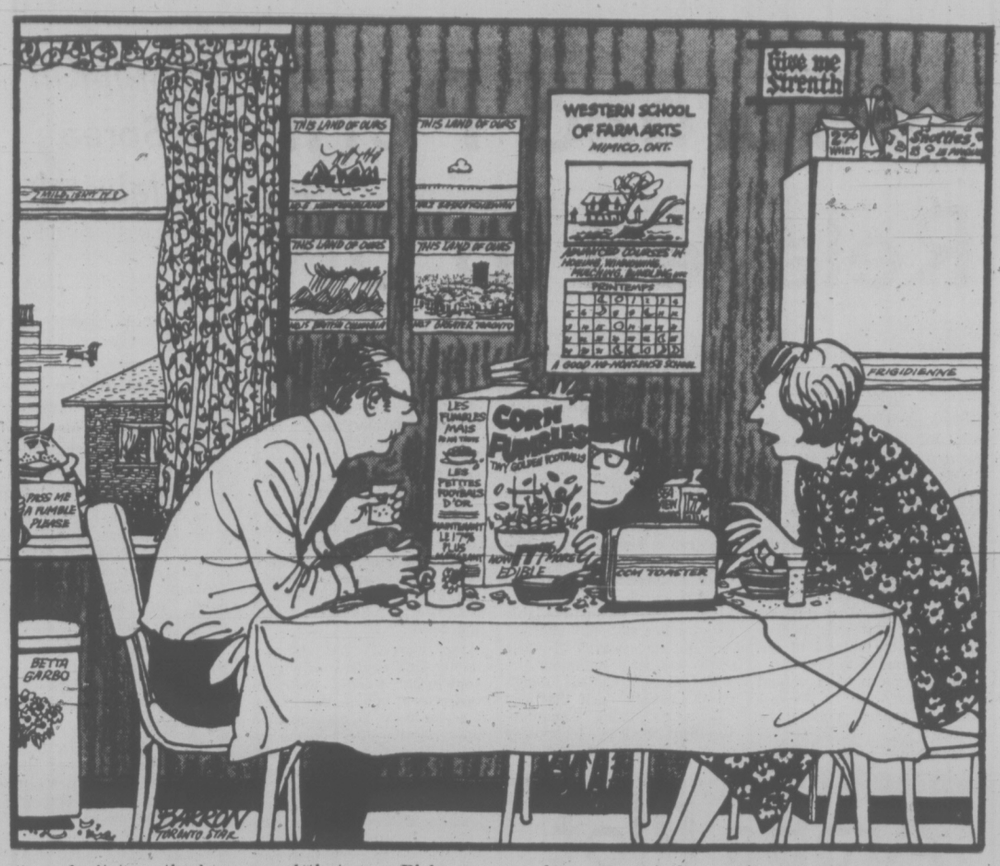
In its new role of soul searching the Social Credit party is striving to be all things to all people. The policy workshop which concluded Tuesday at Harrison Hot Springs was only the preliminary bout to the main event which will take place in November when the full party gets together for what promises to be a rousing convention. But it was obvious that the Socred hierarchy is forcing change on the rank and file. Whether individual party members will accept vague new directions remains to be seen.

Party leader Bill Bennett doesn't seem worried that he may lose esteem among those who revered his father. That's politics. And now that Conservative Party Leader Scott Wallace has given the Unity Movement the coup de grace Social Credit has emerged as the major political alternative to the NDP, if only because of 10 MLAs. Yet in trying to be the complete political party Social Credit runs the risk of eroding its traditional support in order to gain a lukewarm push from British Columbians dissatisfied about the Barrett government's performance. With unwarranted confidence, the party dismisses Liberal and Conservative votes as negligible in the next election. It is almost as if the Socreds possess a crystal ball.

But magic or luck has a way of deserting people and parties at the worst time. Mr. Bennett always dismissed a coalition to defeat the NDP, yet he is now asking the people of B.C. to believe that his party has achieved a mental coalition. Each time a Liberal or Conservative comes into the fold it is announced with a great flourish. We are told that a Cowichan-Malahat membership drive netted 46 memberships out of 60 calls. It's a real morale booster for a party that sees power almost within its grasp again.

What many people will be asking in the next year is whether Social Credit has really changed? No question, the party is trying. But, nothing really new — except for Social Credit — happened at Harrison Hot Springs. Non-partisan resource people together with party members hammered out compromises and new initiatives to be taken back to the hustings for discussion. Too many resolutions ended up in nothing. For example, the party recognizes the serious complaints of the Indian people and proposes an in-depth study to resolve their grievances. Doesn't the party realize that armed Indians are blocking roads and occupying parks because of too much talk and too little action?

It is this kind of waterhead liberalism which makes people suspicious about the party handing out the same old wine in a new bottle. Like the federal Liberals, Social Credit has to learn to be humble if it expects the universe to unfold as it should.



". . . don't turn the box around that way, Ricky . . . you know your father can't stand all that French in the morning . . ."

The Prairies the 51st State?

An American writer has taken a deep breath and predicted a dismal future for the nation occupying the upper half of the North American continent — a republic of Quebec, the prairies joined to the United States, the remainder of Canada in isolated fragments.

It's the prediction of affairs in the year 2024 by Emmet John Hughes, a journalist and former speech writer for late President Dwight Eisenhower, in a special issue of Saturday Review-World concerned with life on this planet 50 years hence.

He, a Japanese academic, a British ex-diplomat and a Jugoslav expatriate peer into the next century to re-draw the world atlas. They see an expansion of the superpowers beyond their present borders and an amalgamation of smaller states into federations, in the middle east and Indochina. But for Canada Mr. Hughes sees disintegration.

"Over the next 50 years, the odds are not overwhelmingly against a French secession from Canada, spurred by the passions of Quebec province. In that event, could the province of Ontario control the impulses of Canada's prairie provinces toward union with the U.S.?"

'An eye-popping futurologist's scenario: Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba fall like ripe apples into the U.S. basket after the independentistes come to power in Quebec. But Mr. Hughes has it all wrong.

He should have said it will be the blue-eyed Arabs of Canada's oil-rich provinces who will set up their own republic. And Quebec — already mortgaged to the hilt on the New York money market — will be repossessed. There will be a sort of "Polish corridor" through British Columbia to give the prairies access to the sea, in exchange for a little petroleum.

All hallucinations of course, and way off the mark. We know what the words "we stand on guard for thee" in the national anthem mean. A collection of fractious principalities would be no buffer at all on America's northern flank, facing Russia across the ice.

Obviously, the CIA would step in long before any Canadian breakup and install the Committee for an Independent Canada in Ottawa to prevent "destabilization." Okay, Mr. Hughes?

GEORGE OAKE

A Masterpiece of Diffusion

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS — In the most subtle and complex exercise of his short political career Socred Party Leader Bill Bennett is trying to enlarge his flock, and at the same time lead it into the mainstream of Canadian corporate politics.

The so-called "policy workshop" here was in fact a Bennett brainchild designed to illuminate the party's intellectual image and to warn the old guard that times have changed.

In essence, the meeting was a masterpiece of indirection, diffusion and open-ended philosophy — the kind of thing the federal Liberals stage when they want to distract the people. Mr. Bennett has turned the tables, using the concept to attract votes.

Three delegates from each constituency, augmented by non-partisan experts — called "resource people" by the party which has adopted newspeak lingo — were divided into 16 policy groups. Under brilliant sunshine they sat in tight little groups on the manicured lawns here debating everything from education to economics.

Nothing Remarkable

What went down after two days wasn't remarkable. The fiscal workshop agreed that a Social Credit government would not enter private industry; the forestry committee wants the provincial government to divest itself of its private holdings in that industry.

Just what you would expect from righteous Social Credit?

Not quite. The law committee chaired by former Attorney General Leslie Peterson said the current prison system does little to punish or reform and recommended smaller prisons "whereby such prisoners will be required and enabled to make amends in practical ways to their victims, or to the community in which they live."

In a right-wing mood the NDP could swallow that resolution whole.

The labor committee was even more interesting, rejecting such staunch Social Credit planks as prohibiting union dues being directed to political parties and the concept of a reorganized mediation board.

None of these dangerous leftist tendencies will necessarily end up in the party manifesto. Delegates will simply pick up the 16 position papers and carry them back to the faithful.

When the various constituency associations have mulled over the new ideas some will presumably find their way onto resolution papers at the November Social Credit convention.

But the quasi-intellectual wing of the party represented here is not the same as the 2,000 plus delegates who will gather in only two months with the smell of NDP blood in their nostrils.

BILL BENNETT

Bill Bennett knows this, admitting that the policy workshop is "a first time for us." It also takes the heat off the leader when the red necks begin tearing up the freshly minted position papers.

Mr. Bennett can shrug and say this is what the resource people told us. And like it or lump it the party must mainline a few vitamins if it wants to coagulate all that free enterprise blood.

On his own, the party leader is a disarming fellow who makes no bones about refurbishing Social Credit's image.

About the party: "There is a tendency for some of our older members to dwell in the past."

On party resolutions: "A lot of them are real zingers that maybe should be defeated."

For example one education resolution wants courses on "the work ethic and how it applies to our free society and our gross national product."

Small wonder that Mr. Bennett feels segments of the party need a touch of the lash. And one thing is certain, if they leave Social Credit there are no other acceptable nesting areas in provincial politics.

Symptomatic of this uncertain delicate path are the men around the leader. Dan Campbell, the old political pro of the Bennett senior regime, is very much in evidence. And then there is young, suave Peter Hyndman, former provincial Conservative party president and twice defeated Conservative candidate.

Whichever way that Billy goes the odd couple is sure to follow.

Round of Exorcism

This kind of schizophrenia — in personnel, ideas and direction — was very apparent as the party went through another round of exorcism this week. The word "image" was on everybody's lips. They said it lovingly as if it were some secret incantation that produces instant election.

Everything will come together if only we can produce a new image, seemed to be the consensus.

Is the Social Credit party so haunted by the past it can't consider the future? Or does it take the future for granted?

An entirely misplaced, breezy confidence exists within the party that it will form the next provincial government. Granted continued NDP financial fumbling makes Socreds cheer, but at election time the public may be loath to court the little old lady in tennis shoes it knows too well, despite scads of new makeup and a mod dress.

Just as a see-through blouse needs a good bust behind it, the Social Credit image needs apparent substance behind it. As yet nothing is visible beyond the gossamer.

Bill Bennett is trying. Last Monday afternoon, tieless and in an open-necked shirt, he was answering the press' questions for the 100th time that day. As he launched into an involved explanation an eastern reporter said, "What are we talking about?"

What indeed Mr. B.?

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Service Facts

In response to the letter dealing with retired Armed Forces and R.C.M.P. personnel working for the federal government I'd like to make a few comments.

If it is such a good deal why is it so difficult to recruit people for these Forces? If it ever becomes law that Forces persons in receipt of a pension are not permitted to work for the federal government, the prospective recruit should be told before he signs up. Such a law, forbidding retired service personnel from working for the federal government, would be the result of a sort of partial means test.

I submit that if a proper means test were required for employment with the federal government it would ask everybody a simple question, ie.: do you have other income from any source? If answered yes, the person would not be employed by the federal government.

There are many wealthy people in the federal service, and one is our prime minister. What about his other income?

I retired from the Armed Forces and then worked for the federal government and I'm getting just enough to disqualify me for welfare. I worked alongside fellow Canadians in the federal civil service who were in Canada in essential industry while I was overseas and now they are far better off financially for two reasons:

1. They get a bigger superannuation, and 2. they were able to get a good equity in property because they were in Canada all the time.

Career persons in the Armed Forces were unable to get the same benefits as were those who served only during war time, because you were unable to get veterans' grants, etc. if you were still serving in the C.A.F.

Another thing, having been in the government service continuously from age seventeen, I was laid off at the age of sixty because of a lack of seniority. The reason: Armed Forces or R.C.M.P. time didn't count, nor were you permitted as others were to add your war service to your seniority. But the Armed Forces pensionable service was subtracted from your time for superannuation, so I was able to get only thirteen years to go on my superannuation. I worked for eight years just for wages.

Now if anybody wants to hear the other side, digest the above, and contact me. I heard that story off and on for twenty-one years; all the above can be confirmed by any person who worked too long for C.A.F. — H. F. Leggett, 948 Lyall St.

Foreign Farm Workers

In a recent article in the local press several vegetable growers criticized the ability of the federal government to assist with the fruit and vegetable harvest by providing foreign workers. In response I believe that the public should be made aware of the facts which are as follows:

For the past several years there has been an influx into Canada of visitors who illegally accepted employment. Large numbers of these people worked during the fruit, berry and vegetable harvesting period for low pay and for long hours in order to subsist.

Last year an amnesty program was introduced allowing illegal entrants to the country to apply for landed immigrant status. Large numbers availed themselves of this program. This has enabled them to openly obtain employment in various industries in which they are working on a continuing basis. They are no longer available for the more arduous and less desirable type of work in the orchards and vegetable patches.

In tandem with the amnesty program a tighter control of visitors has been put into effect. Visitors are not permitted to work without a work permit showing the name of the employer, the type of work, wage rate, etc. If an employer seeks a permit for a worker and the wages are substandard and the working conditions leave something to be desired then in all probability the permit will not be issued. Another criterion is that permits will not be issued if there are unemployed Canadian citizens available in the area.

There are several seasonal agricultural programs available for various purposes in different parts of the country. One that could assist where there is a shortage of labor is the Mexican seasonal agricultural workers program. It requires that a farmer requesting this type of help must provide return economy class air fare (reimbursable by worker) from Mexico, have suitable accommodation available and provide either board or food and cooking utensils at a minimum cost of $2.10 per day.

The farmer signs a contract and as a result is required to keep various pay records. Contracts are to be no shorter than six weeks and not longer than eight months. The workers participating are issued temporary entry visas and work permits and must return to Mexico on expiry of the contract.

This program has been made available to some farmers in the area and has been rejected chiefly because of the cost involved.

The harvest of the local berry and fruit crop went fairly smoothly through the implementation by farmers of "U Pick" operations. There are many advantages in the use of this system from the point of view of the farmer. During the past four years the number of workers requested from the CMC for farm labor has reduced from over 2,000 to about 500 this season. Reasons are obscure but do include "U Pick," conversion of farm land to subdivision and many farmers upon reaching retirement age giving up farming.

I believe that the government of Canada in co-operation with the provincial government has made every possible effort to assist the fruit and vegetable growers. — S. R. Purdy, manager, Canada Manpower Centre, Vancouver, B.C.

From the Task Force

I appreciate the fact that haste was involved in your reporting of the News Conference, on Friday, September 13, re the releasing of the Report on the Community Colleges of British Columbia. However, the inaccuracies, misinformation and lack of depth in reporting I do not appreciate.

Let me start with that negative headline "Trustee Elimination Urged." Believe me, sir, the Task Force on the Community College does not really recommend the elimination of anyone! The fact is we envisage five committees on which we hope trustees will be able to play a co-ordination role between the schools and colleges. Also the term, "school boards," appears at least four times, on page nineteen, where we spell out the composition of these committees which will, in many cases, be supplying new programs and services to the community.

It is the desire of the Task Force that with such co-operation, the residents of a region will be ensured of even more efficient and effective use of existing educational resources. An example would be the Media-communications services committee.

Actually, it is the recommendation regarding the Provincial Government paying all college operating costs, except for revenue from nominal and provincially uniform tuition fees, that will allow for a change in the composition of college boards. No longer would local school boards be responsible for as much as forty per cent of the costs of some educational programs. No longer would a trustee be able to be chairman of the local school board as well as the chairman of the Community College. How can anyone serve two masters?

At the present time a college councillor receives no honorarium. However, with the greatly increased responsibilities envisaged for college board members the Task Force recommends a maximum honorarium of $2,000 per member. We doubt if it is wise for anyone to receive two honorariums.

One final point regarding the recommendation for a new college area for Northern Vancouver Island. With a 1971 census population of 73,822 this ara is the largest of the four regions of new college development. The concentration of population in Courtenay-Campbell River lies almost at the geographic centre of the region and would be the logical site for a core facility. This college would serve not only the three towns, Port Alice, Campbell River, and Port Hardy, that you listed in your report but also centres such as Alert Bay, Courtenay, Comox, Gold River, Port McNeill as well as Powell River.

I realize, sir, that it is impossible to summarize over one hundred recommendations. Perhaps in summation, I should invite your readers to write to the Research and Development Division of the Department of Education for their free copy of our report entitled "Towards the Learning Community," and then let them be the judge. — Hazel L'Estrange, Chairman, Community College Task Force, 5125 Empire Drive, Burnaby 2, B.C.

From the Times of September 25, 1914

TORONTO — Sir James Whitney, premier of Ontario since 1905, died after a prolonged illness. Born in Williamsburg, Ont. in 1843, he was a graduate of Osgoode Hall law school and practised law at Morrisburg. His first attempt at politics was in 1896 when he was the unsuccessful Conservative candidate for the county of Dundas in an election to the legislature. Two years later, however, he was elected and in 1896 became leader of the opposition. On the defeat of the Ross government in 1905, he was called on to form a government. He was knighted by King Edward VII in 1908 on the occasion of the Quebec tercentenary celebrations.

'Voluntary Arbitration' May Be One Way Out

By WILLIAM KELLY

(Kelly is a former vice-president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen who now is an assistant deputy minister of the federal department of labor.)

There is no technique that I know of which will put an end to disputes and work stoppages.

But, there are undoubtedly improvements to be made in the collective bargaining system, which will reduce the incidence of work stoppages.

What is required is constructive experimentation in impasse resolution techniques, rather than confrontation through strike or lockout.

Over the past six months, the department of labor has been advocating that arbitration on a voluntary basis has a key role in industrial relations, particularly in major service industries, and should be considered as one of the techniques or "tools" for resolving collective bargaining impasses.

Until recently, in North America the word "arbitration" has been stigmatized by many trade union leaders. This holds true to a greater extent in Canada than in the United States.

Encouraging

There is evidence indicating that more and more trade union leaders are starting to view voluntary arbitration as a viable method for the resolution of certain disputes.

The experimental steel negotiations recently concluded in the United States had a provision for use of voluntary arbitration if an impasse were reached. Such negotiations are very encouraging.

What is more encouraging is that the United Steelworkers of America and the steel industry have reached prior agreement to use the same technique during the next round of bargaining.

In April 1973, a National Commission for Industrial Peace was established in the United States.

It is composed of some of the top people in labor and mangement. The commission was charged with "exploring methods by which labor and management may best reconcile their differences through the collective bargaining process consistent with the public interest in the outcome of negotiations.

There is one particularly-significant passage in a report which the commission gave recently to former president Richard Nixon:

"Authoritative and respected leaders now speak more freely of employing means other than shutdowns to resolve differences that arise in negotiations.

"Three outstanding leaders of labor, who are members of our commission, George Meany, I. W. Abel and Paul Hall, as well as a number of others, are urging labor organizations to give favorable consideration to voluntary arbitration. They emphasize the costs and burdens of strikes.

"They also point out the mutual benefit of co-operating with their industry by assuring it of uninterrupted operations or production in the face of increasingly-difficult competitive conditions internationally as well as domestically."

Having extolled the virtue of voluntary arbitration as a legitimate but under-utilized "tool" in the resolution of collective bargaining impasses, let me hasten to add, the best technique, and one that will be around for some time, is mediation.

As a mediator who has been involved in many major disputes, perhaps I have a bias, but aside from contract disputes settled in direct negotiations, more disputes have been settled in direct negotiations, more disputes have been settled through the mediation process than any other procedure.

The railway unions in Canada demonstrated that mediation can work when in 1968 the non-operating railway unions reached agreement with the railways, through early mediation, prior to the expiration of the existing contract.

Prior to 1968, it had been said that no real bargaining ever took place in the railway industry until after a conciliation board report, and usually only when the dispute received the attention of Parliament. Mediation also was used to settle the 1970 round of bargaining.

There are times of course that mediation will fail. The only power a mediator has is the power of his persuasion. Combining the mediation and arbitration process can be a very useful technique in certain types of disputes, and I would like to see further experiments in this direction.

Where the parties voluntarily arm a skilled mediator with the powers of an arbitrator to use if necessary, he has the muscle to cope with situations where the parties are hopelessly deadlocked. This technique has been used with some success in the West Coast longshoring industry in the Unite States, and has been described as the "med-arb" concept.

The most important factor in this concept is that labor and mangement, while party to an arbitation proceeding, still have the opportunity to carry out the negotiation process.

There is great potential for this technique in industries, such as the railway industry, where the parties realize that a strike will result in severe adverse effects on the economy of the country or a community, and would inflict more punishment on the public than on the parties to the dispute.

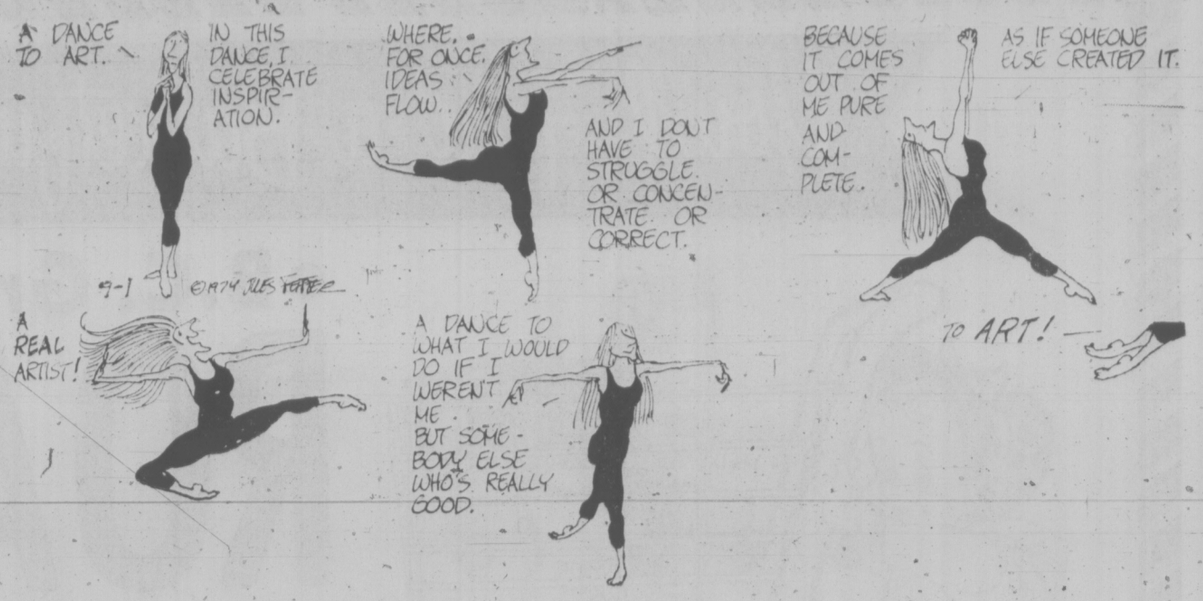
In Canada, we are greatly encouraged by the positive reaction of the Canadian Railway Labor Association to our suggestions to explore new methods to avoid the kind of confrontation experienced last summer. The chairman of CRLA has written the minister of labor affirming the willingness and desire of officers of the assocation's unions to explore the possibilities for change and innovation.

Good Attitude

Labor Minister John Munro has since met, along with officials of the department, with the railway union leaders and representatives of management. We were very much impressed with the attitude displayed by both sides, and their willingness to discuss and consider methods of dispute resolution other than the traditional strike and lockout method.

There is still much to be done, but the thinkers on both sides of the table know that the public outcry against crippling strikes will not abate, and they realize that it is incumbent upon labor and management to innovate and experiment in alternatives to confrontation.

Failing this, they can visualize our legislators forced into restrictive labor legislation by demand of the public, which could be unpalatable to both labor and management.



Social Shifts Changing Canada

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — From transcript of CTV's Question Period of September 8, 1974:

"Question: How many children have you got, Madame Sauve?

The Hon. Jeanne Sauve: One.

Question: Could you have had more?

J. Sauve: What a question . . . I was free to have about 15 if I wanted to, I suppose."

Madame Sauve is presently federal minister of the environment.

The grandest demographic questions are her responsibility. Particularly, the relationship of Canada's policies on population and resources — to a world future where sheer numbers of people and their needs in food and energy may mean global tragedy.

Madame Sauve was the political head (while she was there) of the Canadian delegation to the conference on world population last month in Romania.

Robert Andras is presently the minister responsible for manpower and immigration. Andras, as minister of the Crown, is always humanly concerned with some problem; he has it under study; it is a difficult matter; but after the study there will come a policy and a plan.

Like a teenager, Andras is always "becoming". It only seems fair to wait and wait. For much longer than the two years Andras has had immigration, we've been waiting for a new or amended immigration policy. The last new one, instituted in the mid-1960s, has the label of the "points" system.

Essentially, it dropped both direct and adminstrative barriers against the colored and the non-Christian immigrant; instead, Canada lets in people from anywhere into Canada if they meet certain, shifting factors of education, training, skills, language facility and occupational shortage.

Judd Buchanan is the minister for Indian and northern affairs. This, polite, intelligent Londoner has responsibilites full of demographic tension and uncertainty. The Indians and Metis, in particular, and the Eskimo to a lesser degree, have birth rates much higher than the national average.

Medical and health initiatives have slashed native mortality rates in Canada but their birth rate has held much higher than the average. So, our native problems and their costs are proliferating at a quick rate. They are accentuated by the growing mobility of the native peoples. They are being drawn more and more to the larger towns and cities — the difficulties in places like Kenora, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

The hard questions on the native people which we must meet are more than their entitlement to a review or a new deal on the land their ancestors "vested in" the Crown. Do we keep the reservation system? Do we retain a special status with special rights and special limitations for certain countrymen known as Indians and Eskimos? Do we extend the same to another large, fast-growing group, the Metis, who have a claim in blood, if in nothing else, to the same consideration?

John Munro, the minister of labor, was recently given the responsibilities towards the "ethnics" of Canada which had first fallen to the late Polish-Canadian minister, Stanley Haidasz. The ethnic responsibility reflects the national policy of "the mosaic", as against the centralizing American "melting-pot".

A profusion of reports is now coming from Statistics Canada as a result of the 1971 census. Ethnicity is a running and pervasive element in the quantitative analysis of the census. Of course, this reflects the "hyphenated" Canadian situation which John Diefenbaker fumed about 15 years ago. The catering to ethnicity by politicians can be superficial; But it has certain effects on demographic policies, especially on immigration.

Immigration policy ignores, at the politician's peril, a big ethnic grouping, say like the Italo-Canadians; and it cannot, in ethical honesty, put up open selective barriers against the yellows or the blacks, the Bhuddists or the Moslems, etc.

Otto Lang is the minister of justice and a man much concerned at this time over the inadequate operations of the law regarding abortion. Lang fears too many abortions are being carried out in Canada, which was not intended by the law. The figure is now about 40,000 a year, perhaps 50,000 if abortions Canadian women obtain in foreign countries are included.

In the main, Canadians are arguing and have argued the issues of contraception and abortion from religious and ethical positions, not from demographic ones. The latter factors should be fitted in. If we go back to our opening with Madame Sauve, we find a prime lump in the demographic bag.

She and her husband are French-Canadians and Roman Catholics. When they were children, Quebec had the highest birth rate and fertility rate in Canada. Today, these are becoming the lowest. Why? The Sauves are a witness to one of the enormous, social shifts of recent generations in Canada. And the phenomenon they symbolize has a direct nexus with the future of federal government "language" policy, Quebec and New Brunswick "language policy," that is, with the future position of the French-Canadian community within the Canadian community.

The "cradle" isn't working for French Canadians. With Bill 22 the Quebec government is trying to redress the cradle and the immigration factors. It seems likely Quebec will consider other steps; so may the Trudeau government, for example, in relation to immigration and manpower policy, in relation to both educational and regional programs.

This hop-skip-and-jump over matters I call "demographic" is mainly a reminder that there are difficult issues abounding in the federal field which are not primarily economic but require early, resolute examination and decision.

BLEEDING-HEART CONSERVATIVES

By GARY LAUTENS

The most violent reactions to the Nixon pardon have come from the small-l liberals. They're seething.

"President Ford was out of his mind to let Nixon off," one of my small-l liberal friends fumed. "They should have put Nixon in jail and thrown away the key, or hanged him."

"I thought you were against capital punishment," I responded.

"Not in this case. For what Nixon did, they should line him up against the nearest wall and shoot the son of . . ."

"Without a trial?"

"Of course. Everybody knows he's guilty. Why waste time dragging this thing through the courts?"

"But surely, if what you say is true, it isn't Mr. Nixon's fault he strayed from the straight and narrow."

"If it isn't his fault, whose is it?" my small-l liberal friend demanded.

"Society's," I said. "Society shapes each of us, placing demands on us, forcing us into certain roles and behavioral patterns. Mr. Nixon is probably not a bad man. He merely reacted to conditions that surrounded him and forced him to accept standards of conduct which, under other circumstances, he would never . . ."

"I never heard so much bull in my entire life," my small-l liberal friend said in disgust. "Don't blame society for what Nixon's done."

"He is the product of the Depression," I pointed out. "The Nixon family was extremely poor and never had the advantages — a big home in the suburbs, fancy cars, membership in a country club. They barely had enough to eat."

"Nixon's mother and father didn't bug the White House or keep an enemies list," he fired back. "He made those decisions, and he alone."

"This is a first offence," I insisted. "It may be a classic case of a person getting in with the wrong crowd, of an ambitious man striving for acceptance in his peer group and momentarily losing his way. What's to be gained by putting him behind bars with felons and ruining his life forever? Perhaps we created Richard Nixon . . ."

"That's a lot of bunk," my small-l liberal friend exploded. "President Ford should have cracked down hard on Nixon and made an example of him. How else will young people learn respect for the law?"

"But think of Mr. Nixon's wife and children," I begged.

"You bleeding-heart conservatives make me sick," he said.

Just Another Cataclysm

By JOHN CROSBY
London Observer

It's the end of the world as we know it. Yeah, man! Reading the newspapers these days is great fun isn't it? A man comes back from holiday and what greets his eyes when he opens the morning papers? Mankind is on the brink of the abyss. It's the end. Or worse. Was it Max Beerbohm who wrote that marvelous parody titled: "The End of Civilization—And After"?

How am I going to top all this? All the best phrases have gone; the most dire prophecies have been staked out. What's left. We stand at the crossroads. Oh, hell, we passed the crossroads last year. We're way past the crossroads. "Shares Plummet into the Unknown," says The Sunday Telegraph. That's the ticket. We're in The Lost World, dinosaurs behind every bush. Things are not only worse than you think but worse than you can think. Behind that door lies — what? The unknown, that's what. Shivers. How can the horror movies compete with the headlines these days?

The letters columns in the London Times the other day headlined: "Can Democracy Survive Inflation?" My goodness, Times readers never used to have thoughts like that. Times letters used to be more like "Football Hooliganism Deplored." Or perhaps a strong stand on procedural reform for the method of choosing bishops. But lately the Times has gone off the deep end altogether.

Have I got this far without mentioning severe cuts in the standard of living, unemployment, bankruptcies, bank failures? Consider them mentioned. From the apocalypse (marvelous word, that) to despair in 12 paragraphs. That's what we columnists are all aiming at these days.

In America a couple of gloom merchants headed by James Dine are running around all the talk shows on television trying to outdoom one another. It's the end of Wall Steet, the end of the dollar (as we know it), the end of Keynesian economics. The end. That's the going word. Full stop.

Dine, incidentally, has been telling all the Americans to export their money abroad. Oh, come, come, Dine, we have gloom merchants just as dire as you telling everyone over here to ship the money over there. Dine is telling all the Americans to put their money in Swiss banks just at the moment when London Vogue is advising us to take our money out of Swiss banks.

My wife has accused me of being much too cheerful in the middle of all this gloom prophecy. Well, I find all this public doom cry encouraging. I view economic prophecy with deep cynicism. Usually the prophets get it exactly wrong. Calvin Coolidge's prophecy of a permanently higher plateau in the world economy was followed by the collapse of the world's stock markets.

In the early days of the Great Depression, instead of predicting that things were going to get very much worse before they got better (as indeed they did), the experts were saying we had just turned the corner. Or at the very latest we would turn it next week. The next week a million more would be thrown out of work and the market would plunge another 100 points.

These oracles were never listened to again and we have turned to the professors. Now the question is: Will these seers lose their credibility when civilization doesn't end next Wednesay?

Probably not. Thorstein Veblen always thought that the evolving capitalist society was destroying not only itself but civilization — back in 1899. Millions survived World War I, the depression, the 30 Years' War and that famine Joseph predicted in Egypt and, after each of those, you might say the world as the people knew it disappeared — and not such a bad thing, either.

Cheer up. It's just another economic cataclysm. Mankind has them all the time. Like hiccups.

Chargex Forms World Cartel

TORONTO (CP) — Five of Canada's major banks, who operate the Chargex credit card system, have joined 13 other countries in a new international corporation called IBANCO.

IBANCO's objectives are to broaden the international blue, white and gold bank card system and streamline international exchange operations. The corporation's 1974 volume has been projected at $10 billion.

In announcing the change, the corporation said a charter setting up the group and appointment of 12 directors will be made at IBANCO's first meeting Oct. 1 in Vancouver.

In Canada, IBANCO will be represented by the Toronto Dominion Bank, Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Royal Bank of Canada, Bank of Nova Scotia, and Banque Canadienne Nationale, who operate Chargex.

Other members of IBANCO include Bank Americard of the United States and Britain's Barclaycard.

A Chargex spokesman described the new corporation as an evolutionary step in the growth of the international charge card system.

Winners Are Declining Breed On Toronto Stock Market

Only about 200 of the 1,210 industrial and mining stocks listed in Toronto are selling at prices above January levels — the other 1,010 are losers.

And the number of winners gets smaller every week. The latest count of 200 is down from 228 at the beginning of September.

Major mining companies are among those to move into the loser bracket in the past three weeks as companies become affected by indications of depressed prices for several metals, mainly copper. The mines were among the most spectacular winners earlier in the year.

Among industrials, car and steel companies have continued to do well and some pulp and paper companies are about staying level.

Ford Canada shares are selling at $64 this week, up $19 from January. Algoma Steel is selling around $42, up $3.62 on the year.

Anglo-Canadian Pulp and Paper is at $18.62, up 62 cents on the year.

Some mines continue to be on the plus side of the ledger but possibly not for long.

Sigma Mines Quebec is at $29 up $2.50, but was at $36.12 at the beginning of September.

Tara Explorations is at $14.87, up $2, but down from $16 three weeks ago.

United Keno is selling around $6.50, up $1.75 but down from $7.12 in the first week of September.

Pamour Porcupine is down sharply to $9.50 from $13 in the past three weeks but is still a winner in 1974 by $1.75.

Dickenson Mines is down to $6.50 from $8.75 three weeks ago, but is ahead on the year by $1.75.

Some selected utilities continue to do well in 1974 despite the downturn in the market.

Bell Canada at $42.37 is up $2.12 on the year and has shown strength this month.

B.C. Tel was up 62 cents at the start of September but has hit the skids in the past three weeks. The stock fell $1.75 Tuesday to close at $46.50, compared to $49 at the start of the year.

A food conglomerate, George Weston, has done well on the TSE this year and is at $21, up $2.50.

Other winners this year include: Brinco $6.82, up $1.50; Consumers Glass $9, up $1.62; Maher Shoes $41, up $9; Northern Electric $22, up $6.50, Peel-Elder $10.82, up $1.82 and Reichhold Chemicals $21.50, up $4.25.

JOBLESS RISE EYED

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Canada's economic slowdown will continue through mid-1975 with unemployment increasing and prices continuing to rise rapidly, the Conference Board of Canada predicted Monday.

Arthur Smith, chairman of the board, told a news conference that real output of goods and services in 1975 is expected to rise only about 1.25 per cent over 1974.

In the first of its quarterly short-term forecasts the board, a private research organization, forecast a rise in the consumer price index of about 12 percent, but with some moderation during the course of 1975.

Much slower growth in employment will accompany the general economic slowdown, the Conference board predicted. It estimated a net increase in total employment of about 80,000, or one percent, compared with an increase of 370,000, or four percent, in 1974.

There will be a substantial increase in the unemployment rate, from an estimated 5.5 percent for 1974 to 7.0 percent for 1975, the board said.

Major reasons for slower growth are a steep decline in new housing, a moderate decline in consumer spending on durable goods, a marked slowing in inventory accumulation, and a temporary further decline in exports of goods and services in relation to imports of goods and services.

In its forecast for 1975 the Board said there would be strong advances in business plant and equipment expenditures, and continued growth in government spending.

Personal income and personal disposable income should remain relatively high, although in real terms, advances will be much slower than over the past four years.

Real per capita income, frequently used as a rough measure of the average standard of living, is expected to rise only 1.5 percent in 1975, compared with increases of about five percent in 1974 and six percent in 1973.

SEATTLE GAS CHIEF SLAMS B.C. GOV'T

Times News Services

SEATTLE — In a bitter attack on the B.C. government Tuesday, James Thorpe, president of Seattle Natural Gas said that increased costs of the fuel to consumers here would go "to support programs which should not be funded by a government."

The Barrett government, he added, was one "which no American could support or be in favor of."

The remarks came in a departure from a prepared text at a press conference called to announce price increases of 15 per cent ot residential users and 30 per cent ot industrial users, effective Nov. 1.

This amounts to about $2.75 a month on a household's gas bill.

Meanwhile, the two Washington State senators, Henry Jackson and Warren Magnussen, reiterated demands that the state not bear the brunt of an expected gas shortfall from B.C. this winter.

They appealed to State Secretary Henry Kissinger to press demands to Federal Energy Minister Donald Macdonald that British Columbia be forced to share the shortfall on a pro rata basis, claiming that the economy of Washington State would be seriously damaged by any cut in gas supply.

Magnussen backed his statement with the claim that the Washington State consumer "has directly financed the largest part of Canada's present gas production capability."

"I am hopeful the Canadians will respond favorably to State Department overtures," he said in announcing the demad.

Natural Gas Shortage Forecast

CALGARY (CP) — The Canadian Petroleum Association said Tuesday there will be a natural gas shortage in Canada in the next few years unless wellhead prices are increased quickly and substantially.

The association, in a submission to the National Energy Board in Ottawa today, said the industry will be able to bring gas supply and demand into balance only when given proper incentives and with the minimum of governmental control.

The association made the 265-page submission on future Canadian gas supply and requirements at the board's request. The report was prepared for the association by Sherman H. Clark Associates of Menlo Park, Calif.

The report said production capacity in existing gas fields is insufficient and Mackenzie Delta and other frontier sources of gas are "most urgently needed" to satisfy Canadian requirements.

"In order to bring supply and demand into balance, much higher wellhead prices will be needed quickly and rapid escalation in prices must be accepted for the balance of this decade."

"In the 1975-79 period, before any frontier gas is likely to be available, the total supply does not meet the domestic demand plus export commitments, but the deficiency is much less pronounced" if gas prices are allowed to reach parity with other energy resources.

The report said it may be too late to avert a shortfall in Canada. What Canada should decide is "the extent of the shortfall by virtue of pricing and general government policy."

Association officials said last week's announcement to increase the export price and Monday's announcement to increase the wellhead price in British Columbia are positive steps.

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald announced Friday that the price of gas exported to the United States will increase to $1 per thousand cubic feet from the current average of 60 cents Jan. 1, 1975.

Recycling Plant 'Noisy Dump'

The recycling depot on Borden is a "noisy eyesore" that has plagued nearby neighbors for three years, Saanich's public works committee was told Tuesday.

"We've had to call police at 10 o'clock at night," Mrs. Patricia Gordon of 4031 Lakehill told the committee." Our children couldn't get to sleep because of glass being smashed for recycling. We hear the sounds of tins crashing constantly, too, and there are thick pieces of glass all over the road where the children have to walk.

"The recycling depot is the biggest eyesore and dump."

Committee chairman Ald. Sandy Noel agreed with Mrs. Gordon that the old winery, now owned by Saanich, "looks quite shabby from the outside".

Now leased to the recycling depot for $1 a year, Noel said Saanich was raising the annual rate for the depot to $10,000 a year, adding the depot may be out of the building by the end of the year.

Ald. John McDonald said a time limit should be given the Capital Regional District for the relocation of the depot. He thought it would be "at least two years" before the depot was relocated.

He suggested a three-year limit.

"We've put up with that place for three years," Mrs. Gordon retorted.

She pointed out the depot is zoned for single-family dwellings but Ald. Bioll Campbell said:

"That property is much too valuable these days for single-family dwellings," adding council would probably rezone it commercial.

Ald. Les Passmore suggested council could limit hours of operation at the depot.

The matter was tabled until the next meeting.

Canada-Japan Trade Surge Seen

OTTAWA (CP) — Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka concluded two days of talks with Prime minister Trudeau Tuesday and came away forecasting a surge in Canadian-Japanese trade, with an emphasis on processed goods.

Tanaka told a news conference that trade volume between the two countries should hit $4 billion this year and may reach $4.5 billion, more than 50 per cent above the record $2.8 billion recorded in 1973.

And there is scope for even greater expansion in the future, he said. Worldwide Japanese trade this year is expected to top $100 billion and the volume affecting Canada, event at $4.5 billion, is small enough to allow more growth.

The major Canadian achievement, of the talks, beyond expanded trade prospects, was a commitment by Tanaka to help Canada reshape the type of exports Canada sends to Japan.

Nearly all materials bought by Japan have been raw or unfinished products, creating little employment before leaving the country. Canada wants to increase secondary manufacturing and to process more raw materials before sending them out of the country.

Tanaka said during the talks he understands Canada's position. He assured Trudeau that Japan does not view Canada merely as a source of raw materials for Japanese industry.

Canadian officials said before Tanaka's four-day visit began that Trudeau's main concern was to point out to his Japanese counterpart that Canada was "more than an exporter of rocks."

Both leaders credited the talks with opening a new and expanded chapter in Canadian-Japanese relations and Trudeau has accepted an invitation to visit Japan at an unconfirmed date.

A communique summing up the meetings said a new era had started and Tanaka spoke of "the dramatic development" of ties when he addressed a dinner in honor of Trudeau Tuesday night. Trudeau gave a formal dinner for Tanaka after the visiting premier arrived Monday.

PRESIDENT'S EMERGENCY POWERS END

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate government operations committee approved a bill Tuesday to bring an end to emergency presidential powers in various fields.

The measure resulted from an 18-month study by a bipartisan special Senate committee into ways to limit expansion of presidential power and establish new standards of presidential accountability.

The bill will terminate four states of declared national emergency established by the Emergency Banking Act of 1933, President Truman's Korean War proclamation of 1950, executive directives relating to the Post Office strike of 1970, and President Nixon's new economic policy proclamation of Aug. 15, 1971.

Rental Aid Service Seeks Funds From City Hall

Victoria Rental Aid Service director Jim Nelson wants help from the city to continue aiding landlords and tenants.

The agency needs city backing now because the service's provincial government funding will be cut off at the end of October and no more money will be available unless the city contributes 50 per cent of the provincial donation, he said at a public meeting Tuesday.

Though the service is receiving money through the department of human resources, Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson recently announced provincial grants will only be made to rental services if municipalities help.

Acknowledging the "valuable work of the service," Ald. Bill Tindall told Nelson city funds from the Landlord and Tenant Advisory Bureau, scheduled for closure next month, could be channelled into the service.

Nelson's request for civic funds a year ago was rejected because council said both organizations could not simultaneously be supported by the city.

About 24,800 persons have been aided by the service since its inception in 1972, Nelson said.

As well as referring renters to places of accommodation and finding "compatible" matches between landlord and tenant, as a report of Nelson's states, the organization investigates bad housing situations with a view to obtaining government action.

Emergency housing is also provided in three local homes for temporary lodging.

Facelift For Road To E. Sooke

A 10-mile stretch of East Sooke Road will be reconstructed during 1975, Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst said today.

Gorst said the department of highways will start on design and plans for the $500,000 project immediately, and work will begin next year.

The section, stretching from Gillespie to the Silver Spur Ranch, was the subject of a 200-signature brief from residents, he said. They felt that with additional traffic generated by East Sooke Park and more people moving to the area, bad road conditions would be worsened.

Mystery Of Sun Shaft Studied

LONDON (AP) — Archeologists will gather in December in the dark recesses of an ancient burial mound in Ireland to view an annual phenomenon that has occurred with precise regularity for 5,000 years.

With the coming of the winter solstice Dec. 21 a thin shaft of sunlight will pierce the darkness to illuminate an altar stone, carved with three mysterious spirals, at the back of the burial chamber 62 feet inside the mount.

The alignment of the tomb's tiny entrance and the altar stone with the sun's rays five days either side of the winter solstice—the sun's lowest point in the heavens—indicates the stone-age people who built the mount around 3100 BC had a remarkably precise knowledge of the solar cycles.

The mound, near the village of Slane in County Meath, about 30 miles northwest of Dublin, predates England's Stonehenge, a mysterious circle of massive stones also aligned with the sun's movements, by more than 1,000 years.

That would make the Irish burial mound the oldest known astronomically oriented monument in the world.

The Irish mound supports the theory that various stone-age cultures in the British Isles investigated solar cycles and may have exchanged information that resulted in the construction of Stonehenge on Salisbury Plain about 1900 BC.

"Stonehenge and its astronomically positioned stones might have become an important repository or library of astronomical knowledge known at the time," said Jon Patrick of the Dublin College of Technology.

Patrick, a lecturer in land surveying, surveyed the astronomical alignment of the Irish mound for Michael O'Kelly, professor of archeology at University College in Cork, Ireland.

A report of the survey appeared in Nature, the British science journal.

During the winter solstice in 1969 O'Kelly observed that four minutes after sunrise the sun's rays shone through the "roof box," a yard-wide rectangular opening just above the entrance. They penetrated to the rear of the burial chamber and fully illuminated it for 17 minutes before the sun moved out of alignment.

Patrick wrote that O'Kelly asked him "to make an accurate survey of the roof box to see if this phenomenon would have occurred when the burial chamber was first built."

After a complicated series of measurements, Patrick concluded "that the sun has shone down the passage to the chamber ever since the date of its construction and will probably continue to do so forever."

Patrick noted that Ireland has about 200 similar burial mounds, sometimes called "fairy forts," but "to my knowledge none of them has a roof box."

"As this structure is unique and as the whole monument is so grandiose," Patrick wrote, "it seems likely that its orientation is deliberate."

Little is known about the people who built the County Meath mound, but archeologists speculate they worshipped the sun and thus gave much attention to its movement through the heavens.

Penetration of the sun's rays to the altar stone, where the dead were apparently cremated, may have symbolized ultimate resurrection.

A 1967 excavation of the tomb floor revealed the burnt bone fragments of about five persons. But "the tomb has been open to visitors since 1699," Patrick wrote, "and an unknown amount of the original burial deposit may have been removed since then."

Ferry Cut Called Ploy

- Tourist industry sees serious revenue losses
- B.C. Ferries has 'obligation to fill the gap'
- City council is 'as much to blame as anyone'

By PAUL MOSS
and PAT DUFOUR

Canadian Pacific was accused today of using the closure of its Seattle-Victoria ferry service as leverage to close down the rail service between Victoria and Courtenay.

Les Woods, manager of the Undersea Gardens, said Tuesday's announcement that the Princess Marguerite will end the service with its final sailing next Monday appears to be a political ploy on the company's part.

By using the loss of the Marguerite as a threat, Woods said, CP can ease through with minimum opposition its plan to abandon the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway operation.

He claimed the reluctance of Washington State Ferries and the Black Ball Transport company to show any interest in providing a service on that route is understandable, because they "don't know what CP is up to."

Reactions of tourist industry representatives were filled with predictions of serious revenue loss, particularly to attractions and businesses in the Inner Harbor and lower Government Street areas which depend heavily on pedestrian tourists.

Several operators used the world "disaster" in interviews with the Times, and foresaw the death of the tourist industry unless a Seattle-Victoria ferry service can be continued by some means.

In most cases they called on the provincial government to fill the gap with a B.C. Ferries vessel, one entrepreneur terming it a "moral obligation."

Saanich and the Islands MLA Hugh Curtis also supported the idea of such a service, operated either by B.C. Ferries alone or in conjunction with Washington State Ferries.

Opposition leader Bill Bennett said the service might be better offered by private enterprise, as the ferry operates outside B.C. boundaries, but if the private sector doesn't respond to a proven need the government should step in.

But Transportation Minister Robert Strachan said there are no such plans at the present time, and Travel Industry Minister Ernie Hall couldn't be reached for comment.

Spokesmen for both the Washington State Ferry Service, operating the Anacortes-Sidney run, and Black Ball, operating the Port Angeles-Victoria service, predicted problems next summer due to extra passenger loads on their services.

Ralph White, Washington State Ferries assitant general manager, declined to say whether his company would consider running a replacement vessel on the Seattle-Victoria route.

Pat Frumento, Victoria manager for Black Ball, said his company has no real option in the matter because it simply has no vessel available for that route.

Ald. Bill Tindall, chairman of Victoria's tourism and commerce committee, said the effect on the city's tourist industry is "almost impossible to calculate."

In the four months up to the end of August this year the Princess Marguerite carried 104,000 passengers, he noted. Assuming the average expenditure per person to be only $15 — it was more likely $25 — that represented a future loss to the community of at least $1.5 million.

"I think it is incumbent upon the provincial government to look seriously at replacing this run," Tindall said. "It is a matter of vital concern."

Woods said during the "magic 100 days" of the summer season the Marguerite probably earned her keep. He said CP could probably balance the books if she and the Princess Patricia were used as convention centres when the ships are tied up alongside during the off season.

By taking off the Marguerite, CP is also dealing a bad blow to its Empress Hotel, for many years a losing proposition, according to CP directors.

"It's going to affect the Empress very drastically," said manager Bill Gray. "Along with the whole of the downtown area."

Apart from the hotel's afternoon teas, mainly patronized by the Marguerite's passengers, room bookings would drop because her passengers stayed at the hotel in "colossal numbers."

Gray was adamant that the B.C. Ferries should step in and provide service between Victoria and Seattle.

"The provincial government is in the business of transportation," Gray said, "And this (the Seattle-Victoria run) is just as important a highway as any of the others."

George Devlin of the Prince Albert Collection of Miniatures says if the provincial government doesn't step in and fill the gap it will be dealing itself a financial blow.

Devlin said at least 40 per cent of the passengers on each run pay for tours on government-owned buses.

"They (the government) have probably got more to lose than anybody else," he said, "They might as well retire half their tour buses and lay off all the bus drivers."

Dentist Dr. Arnold Lane, owner of the Royal London Wax Museum, predicted the service cancellation would be "a disaster not only for us but the whole of downtown Victoria."

He said the vessel's passengers have always accounted for a significant proportion of the museum's business. "Over the years CP have phoned us from Seattle to tell us the number of people aboard, so we could adjust our staff accordingly."

Lane said Victoria city council is "as much to blame as anyone," because when the company proposed some years ago the development of its Inner Harbor property, partly as a means of underwriting the ferry service, the city turned down the idea.

He said B.C. is happy enough to rake in the revenue that tourism generates, yet the present mayor of Victoria gives the impression that he is "telling the $3 boys to stay home," while the minister of highways seems to dislike the influx of American motorists on our roads.

"The Americans are our greatest friends but some of our leaders don't know it," Lane said.

"If tourism is our greatest industry, and I think it is, the obligation must fall on someone to take up the slack left by CP."

Rather than acquiring the service outright it might be cheaper for the province to underwrite the cost of CP's operation, he suggested.

At the Sydney Reynolds chinaware store in the Belmont Building, strategically located for souvenir-hunting tourists, proprietor Geoffrey Reynolds admitted business would suffer appreciably from the loss of the Marguerite bringing up to 2,000 passengers daily in peak periods.

The whole tourist industry would be affected, incurring a "tremendous loss in revenue," he said.

"Something else will have to be put on if we want this town to survive."

Al Frame, manager of the Classic Car Museum, agreed the provincial government couldn't allow the run to be cancelled. It should either take it over or have CP carry on with a different type of ship, capable of carrying more cars.

"We do surveys all the time," he said, "And, at the very minimum, 10 per cent of our business comes from that ship."

Frame said Bob Nixon, manager of the Greater Victoria Visitors Information Centre was "selling it short" when he evaluated revenue from the Marguerite this season as $9 million.

Lloyd Davies, president of the Downtown Business Association, said he would like to see some other branch of free enterprise, perhaps the Black Ball company, fill the gap left by the closure of the CP ferry service.

In the One-Upmanship game the next thing to having an unlisted telephone number is having a numberless number.

There are 13 such subscribers in the Nanaimo phone book under the heading Toll Stations (Including Radio Telephones)—names like Pelto Tranquil, Princess Point and DeCourcy Estates.

B.C. Tel explains they are all remote locations, such as unserviced DeCourcy Island, Pachena Point Lighthouse or Glad Tidings bible camp at Nine Mile Point, Sechelt, each with an FM radio telephone, one-of-a-kind for the area.

When more than one subscriber is located in a single area served by radio, the distinction is lost and the system reverts to numbers.

Rent Crisis Brings Call For Mobiles

A proposal to establish a mobile home park on the outskirts of Victoria, for use as emergency housing during the current rental crisis, will be presented today to government officials by the Victoria Rental Aid Service.

The suggestion, along with four others, will be presented to Premier David Barrett, Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson and all local mayors.

Jim Nelson, director of Rental Aid, will submit the written proposals and "keep on sending them letters and meeting with them," he said, so the politicians don't just "throw them in the garbage."

The four other proposals include:

—Establishment of a co-operative for the construction and rental of prefabricated homes, as a joint venture between government and the private sector, and the use of "able-bodied men now unemployed and receiving assistance" in construction to lower costs.

—Government purchase of motels or apartment units for use as emergency housing.

—Provision of mortgages through co-operation between government and the private sector so people can purchase homes with money loaned at low interest rates.

—Government provision of mortgages at low rates of interest so more people can own homes and ease the pressure on existing rental facilities.

Nelson compiled the suggestions after two years of working with renters and learning their problems, and made them public at a Tuesday night meeting held at the Community Action Group headquarters on Fisgard.

Indians See Halt To Clam Digging

A B.C. fisheries regulation which prohibits shell fishing within 400 feet of a marina would stop the Tsawout Indian Band from collecting clams on its own shoreline, band manager Gus Underwood said today.

The government regulation sets 400 feet as the minimum shellfish closure area around a marina to guard against people collecting contaminated shellfish.

The 400-foot boundary would be the minimum imposed around the planned Saanichton Bay Marina and the closure would include some of the Tsawout Indian Band's shoreline in the bay.

Del McCaw, a provincial fisheries inspector, said the 400-foot closure was a minimum, and, depending on the size of the marina, 800 or 1,000 feet could be set as the shellfish boundary.

McCaw confirmed the Indian shoreline could be affected by the closure and said the final decision as to whether the Indians could collect clams on their own shoreline would have to be made by federal water quality inspectors.

"It's a safeguard against shellfish contaminated by sewage or effluent from a marina," McCaw said.

Underwood said today he

was worried because the 400-feet closure would include the James Island wharf which is used by people from the area for shrimping and gathering crabs.

But McCaw said shrimp and crab are not affected by the regulation because they have separate digestive systems which are not eaten for food.

Clams and oysters would be the shellfish affected, he said, and oysters are not known to be abundant in the Saanichton Bay area.

Underwood said he would bring the closure regulation to the attention of Resources Minister Bob Williams at a meeting Friday. Williams has agreed to meet with six people opposing the marina, including Underwood, in his office Friday afternoon.

Underwood will give Williams a petition which has been in circulation since Monday, opposing the marina development.

"We have lots and lots of signatures on the petition and we're going to tell him we can get lots more if given a little more time," Underwood said.

Island Member Quits Arts Access Group

Southern Vancouver Island's representative on the provincial Arts Access committee has resigned because he feels the tradition of giving money to artists who are already established will continue.

"I don't feel I want to work just to keep things going the way they are," said Rients van Goudoever of Sooke, who quit at a recent meeting and said afterwards the committee should concern itself with broader cultural questions than the funding of individual artists and arts groups.

The committee, established a year ago, is examining current government policy toward artists and is discussing how policy should be changed to provide better artistic opportunity.

"It's more than individual artists who have to face the future" and a life of increased leisure, said van Goudoever, who added that the committee should be concerned with cultural growth for everyone.

If the committee aimed for establishment of a guaranteed annual income for artists, he said, individuals could pursue art without having to worry about working for profit.

"If the funds were available, then I could start thinking about what I really wanted to do," he said.

Committee members are agreed on some points such as abolition of Community Arts Councils which administer funds to the arts, said van Goudoever.

Members are divided on other issues, however, he said.

Van Goudoever also objects to the government's proposed setting up of interim boards in the wake of the arts councils and feels board representatives should be elected by popular vote.

Aid Plea—Strings Attached

Continuation of mounting debts could eventually prove disastrous to the Victoria Symphony if no significant assistance is received, symphony president M. E. Ronahan warned today.

However, the current deficit poses no immediate threat to the symphony operation, she said.

The symphony has a $30,000 deficit from its 1973-74 season and a $33,000 deficit is projected for this season.

The Victoria Symphony Society decided Tuesday at a board of directors' meeting to launch a fund-raising drive to raise $75,000 next February and March.

Fund-raising activities of the society's special committee will also continue.

To date only $5,000 has been raised, but subscriptions to the fund are still dribbling in.

Ronahan admitted that the time is late for fund-raising efforts.

"We probably should have undertaken a major campaign several years back," she said.

Money from the spring campaign will be used one-third for operating expenses, one-third applied to the deficit and one-third for instrument renewal.

"People don't realize that instruments wear out and must be renewed," she said. "This is a major area of concern."

Tuesday's meeting was told that a quarterly newsletter to keep all members and season ticket subscribers informed on symphony matters will be published shortly.

It was reported that an acoustic shell, the gift of an anonymous American symphony supporter is now in place at the Royal Theatre and preliminary tests conducted by Maestro Laszlo Gati and some orchestra musicians indicate considerable sound improvement.

Q: Has there ever been a slave sale made in Canada and if so when and where?—J. K.

A: Yes. Slavery, although not a major factor in the development of Canada, according to Encyclopedia Canadiana, is a fact of our history and marketing and use of slaves was common until the beginning of the 19th century. French explorers and fur traders accepted the practice of Indians who frequently held as slaves men and women captured in tribal wars, and purchased Indian slaves for their own use. Negro slaves were imported into the French colony early in the 17th century. In Nova Scotia, the British who settled in Halifax in 1749 brought with them a large number of slaves. Legislation to outlaw slavery began as early as 1793 in Upper Canada, which prohibited import of slaves and gave freedom for slave children over 25.

A feature article in the June 8, 1974, issue of Weekend Magazine, carried in the Victoria Times, described the New Brunswick slave trade, involving the sale of paupers into slavery. It said the last public sale of people took place in Sussex, N.B., in 1898.

Four Games in Six Days No Cake Walk in Moscow

VANCOUVER — So now it's all or nothing at all for Team Canada in hockey's summit series which suddenly is a four-game set in the hallowed Luzhniki Arena in Moscow. And if anyone thinks the Canadian schedule was tough — four games in seven days — the Soviets have gone one better. Their four games will be crammed into six days starting Oct. 1 and finishing on Sunday Oct. 6 with back-to-back games on Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 5 and 6.

That may work more hardship on the Canadians than the Russians, it is felt, because of the younger legs of the Soviet national squad. But at least one Canadian player doesn't think so.

Pat Stapleton, probably the best defenceman on Team Canada, game in and game out, and a member of the Team Canada '72 team, feels that people tend to underestimate the '74 club.

"I think we came together pretty good in Edmonton," he suggested, while reminiscing that the talent laden '72 didn't actually begin to jell until after it had spent 10 days in Sweden. In addition, the present Canadian team is considered in better condition than its predecessor and should be that much more fit following exhibition games in Helsinki and Gothenbourg.

Stapleton also suggested that the larger ice surface in Moscow may not work entirely to the detriment of the Canadians because "we have a couple of players who can dangle. He mentioned Bobby Hull and Mike Walton. He could have added Ralph Backstrom and Rejean Houle. And, as a matter of fact, it will readily be recalled that Paul Henderson, the hero of the '72 series with three game winners is as many games, had no problem in Moscow with the ice.

Game Plan Vital to Success

The key, however, to the Canadians' chances has to be the game plan. One man in and one man only as a forechecker was the pattern that worked so successfully in the first two games, a 3-3 tie in Quebec City and a 4-1 Team Canada win at Toronto. Then in Winnipeg, with some different personnel, it fell apart. And in Vancouver on Monday there were also several indiscretions evident in the ranks of Team Canada.

Sure, Johnny McKenzie was the chief culprit, but he made no apologies. "That's the way I play," he said in the dressing room. And if this time perhaps it put an extra strain on the Team Canada defence, maybe the next time it will spur them on. Certainly he kept the Russians loose which again is part and parcel of the Canadian game.

And speaking of checking, for a moment, Hull brought the house down at a reception and au revoir dinner following the game, when he remarked "some years ago I was asked to represent the Black Hawks (of that other league) on Gordie Howe night in Detroit.

"I said then that in all my time in the NHL and playing against Gordie I had enjoyed every high-sticking moment of it. Tonight I think I can say that some of our visitors have enjoyed it too."

Earlier Howe, for his part, had said of a terrific check he threw at Boris Mikhailov early in the first period when the Russians were threatening to take control and were outplaying Team Canada by a wide margin. "I had him lined up all right, but my timing was off. If it had been on, I would have had him against the goalpost, not just into the net." Howe later threw the check that put Alexander Yarushev out of the game.

Old Pros Shouldn't Blow It

So the Russians, many of whom weren't even born when Howe started his NHL career, have learned to admire and respect this grand veteran. Because when Hull, was making his comments at dinner, the Russian players were listening to a synchronised transmission of his address in Russian. And many broke out in smiles when Howe's methods of greeting on the ice were mentioned. Some of them undoubtedly could have displayed the scars.

Still, it was a night of disappointment, really, the overall feeling being that old sweats should never have blown a three-goal lead. That's what hurt the most. Coach Billy Harris was most adamant. He felt the let-down was responsible for the tie result.

However, he wasn't about to throw in the towel. Rather he suggested: "You know it's hard for me to think this team could be improved; they have all given so much."

When asked by a Soviet press reporter if he would like to coach a team containing the likes of Bobby Orr, Phil Esposito, and other NHL stars of the '72 series, plus the WHA's best he said:

"You know, when I was asked to coach this team, it took me 10 seconds to decide to say 'yes.' Certainly with Orr and Esposito, it would be a better team and if I was asked to coach it, it wouldn't take me any longer to say 'yes' again. Besides, I love to travel."

All in all, however, until Game 5 in Moscow, it's the World Hockey Association which has won the most so far in the series. Given little chance to stay close to the Soviets, Team Canada certainly has won a new respect across the country.

And if I'm still not convinced that they can repeat the heroics of Team Canada '72, there are a few guys there who are going to give it a great try.

As Howe said at dinner. "We admire those Russian gentlemen very much, but we're sure going to try like hell to beat 'em."

He could have added: "Right Bobby?" And he wouldn't have been far wrong.

Cats Outscore Totems But Tie

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

NANAIMO — Victoria Cougars scored seven goals and Seattle Totems counted only five but that didn't give the Western Canada Hockey League team a winning edge in Tuesday's exhibition game at Civic Arena.

Victoria defenceman Wade Smith slapped a rebound past his own goalie with a minute and 44 seconds left in the game and the Cougars had to settle for a 6-6 draw with the Totems.

It was the Cougars' second tie in as many nights but Victoria coach Pat Ginnell relished the latest one far more than Monday's 6-6 sawoff with Kamloops Chiefs of the WCHL.

Monday, the Cougars blew a 5-1 second-period lead.

Tuesday, the shoe went on the other foot. The Seattle entry in the Central Professional Hockey League held a 5-1 lead midway through the game and actually was fortunate to come out with the tie.

Cougars scored five straight times to take a 6-5 lead into the final few minutes. They appeared headed for victory until Smith scored on his own goalie, Bob Leslie.

Ginnell shrugged it off as "one of those things" and obviously was far more impressed with the Cougars' comeback efforts against the Vancouver Canuck farmhands.

More important, Ginnell feels the Tuesday exhibition may have uncovered a strong third line. So far, lines centred by holdover Mel Bridgman and newcomer Greg Miazga have carried Victoria's offense.

But Jim Gustafson, Al Hill and Rick Peter — united for Tuesday's exhibition — came up with an impressive performance. Peter scored two goals while Hill and Gustafson each counted one against Totems.

In addition to figuring in four of the six Victoria goals, the Gustafson-Peter-Hill unit came up with a strong checking performance. They were on the ice for only two of the six Seattle goals, including the one scored by Smith.

Dan Lucas and Don Cairns counted Victoria's other goals.

Defenceman Chris Murfey was credited with three of the Seattle goals, including the Smith effort. He also picked up assists on goals scored by Dan Seguin and Andy Spruce.

The other Seattle marker went to Dan Gloor.

The Orland Kurtenbach-coached Totems outshot Cougars 45-40 but, surprisingly, the Cougars came up with an edge in another department.

Victoria's juniors appeared to be bigger, generally, than the professionals.

"Definitely," thought Vancouver scout Larry Popein.

The Cougars continue their exhibition schedule with games tonight and Thursday in Kamloops, then return to Victoria for a return engagement with the Totems in Memorial Arena on Saturday.

Soviet Ice Doesn't Worry Henderson

HELSINKI (UPI) — The Team Canada '74 hockey squad arrived today to establish a training camp and play warmup games before the resumption of their series against the Russian national team in Moscow Oct. 1.

Their red-and-white chartered Air Canada jet arrived from Vancouver in a driving rain at Helsinki airport. Most players said they were tired after their flight.

Team Canada warms up for the Russian series with a game against Finland Sept. 27, and against Sweden in Gothenburg Sept. 29.

The World Hockey Association team is tied with the Soviet Union, 1-1-2, after their first four games.

Paul Henderson of the Toronto Toros, who played on the National Hockey League team which won the Soviet series in 1972, said, "The WHA team is better prepared to play the Russians than were the NHL two years ago.

"One of our advantages is that Billy Harris knows the Russians pretty well after coaching Sweden a few years back. Besides, the Russian team hasn't changed much within the years and at least I know the players and their style pretty well. But what we are gaining in skating ability and shooting, the Russians are taking back in their systematic play.

"Still, I'm not too frightened about their home advantage. We did beat them in Moscow two years back, didn't we?" he said.

The Finnish team this year is far weaker than the team which nearly took the bronze medal in April in the world championships held at the same Helsinki ice hall. Two of the team's star players — captain Veli-Pekka Ketola and defenceman Heikki Riihiranta — defected to the WHA's Winnipeg Jets.

Bobby Hull, who switched to the WHA last year, said, "I think the European additions to the WHA makes the play more colorful and, so far, the Swedes and the Finns have done very well, very well on our team."

Gordie Howe of the Houston Aeros quipped back to Hull, "Yeah, good for you, bad for us."

BOTH LEAGUES NEXT SERIES?

OTTAWA (CP) — The team representing Canada in any future hockey series against the Soviet Union will have players from both the National Hockey League and the World Hockey Association if Health Minister Marc Lalonde gets his way.

Entering a cabinet committee meeting Tuesday, Mr. Lalonde said he is pleased with the results so far in the present eight-game series, tied with one win for each team and two ties.

"But I hope that once this one is over we can start planning for the next series in two years time with both leagues getting together.

"I hope this will be possible and I'll do anything I can to help it happen."

Mr. Lalonde said discussions are going on "at the international level" for the renewed participation of Canada in international hockey.

"This particular series is not a step towards that as such, but the last two series have certainly helped in the general context with the reappearance of Canada in the area of international hockey."

Asked if the current talks would lead to participation in world competition of a Canadian amateur team or if professionals would continue to represent this country, Mr. Lalonde said he cannot give any details while negotiations are in progress.

"However, I think we'll have some developments in the next few months."

Canada dropped out of top-level international amateur hockey several years ago after a prolonged dispute over the use of professional players.

In 1972, the Soviet Union agreed to an eight-game series against Team Canada '72, recruited from NHL teams. The current version of Team Canada consists of WHA players only.

Stamps Pull Upset But Injuries Costly

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders pulled off one of the biggest upsets in the Canadian Football League this season Tuesday night with a 38-13 win over Montreal Alouettes. But Calgary coach Jim Wood was still singing the blues.

"We're going to need a witch doctor to get ready for Saskatchewan Sunday," said Wood after the Stampeders improved their record to 3-7 and moved to within four points of third-place Saskatchewan Roughriders in the Western Conference.

"We have a whole flock of injuries and won't know until tomorrow (Wednesday), but it doesn't look good."

The injured players that had Wood concerned include wily defensive tackle John Helton, with a muscle tear in his side; linebacker Mickey Doyle, with a strained knee; defensive end Jim Bond, also with a strained knee; and defensive end Larry Moore, with a pulled hamstring.

Wood was cautious about assessing Calgary's chances of gaining the third and final playoff spot.

Montreal, now 7-3 and two points up on second-place Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the East, fell apart at the beginning and never recovered. Three Calgary interceptions led directly to Stampeder touchdowns and quarterback Peter Liske guided the Calgary offence to 363 yards in the air and 53 on the ground.

"When it counted, Peter got us the points," Wood said. "The offensive line did a helluva job giving him protection, but the main thing was that Pete stayed with the game plan and executed perfectly."

Liske got the Stampeders on the scoreboard early in the first quarter with a 14-yard pass to Moody Jackson. Several plays later, Howard Starks picked off a pass by Montreal's Jimmy Jones and the Stampeders drove in to score on a 15-yard toss from Liske to Tom Forzani.

Less than a minute after the second touchdown, linebacker Roger Goree grabbed a Jones' pass and rumbled 25 yards into the end zone. Cyril McFall converted for a third time to give Calgary a 21-0 edge before about 20,000 wildly cheering fans.

Jones got seven points back before the quarter ended on a 32-yard pass to Larry Smith that was converted by Don Sweet.

Calgary's Jim Silye snared a Jones' pass at the Calgary 40 to set up the drive that ended when Don Willingham crashed over from the one. Jones had a fourth pass picked off in the first half, by Starks, but Calgary failed to turn that one into more points.

Less than one minute into the third quarter, Liske hooked up with Jackson on a 97-yard touchdown bomb. The rest of the scoring in the game was provided by Jones and Smith again on a 56-yard pass for Montreal and a 47-yard field goal by McFall, who made all the Calgary converts.

Despite the score, the Alouettes hurt their own cause with 14 penalties for a loss of 96 yards.

The Vancouver-Garibaldi Olympic Committee has met opposition from the provincial government on its application to hold the Games because of high costs and fears that they would damage the environment in the Whistler Mountain area north of Vancouver.

Vancouver Pair Makes Davis Cup Team

Canada's four-man team that will face Mexico in 1975 Davis Cup play here Oct. 4-6 was named Tuesday.

Rejean Genois of Quebec City, Pierre LaMarche of Montreal, along with two Vancouver players — Don McCorfick and Tony Bardsley were the choice of the selection committee.

Jean-Yves Laurin, president of the organizing committee for the tournament, said Mexico will be represented by Raul Ramirez, Roberto Chavez, Joaquin Loyo-Mayo and Vincente Sarzia in the North American-zone matches.

Last October Canada was beaten 4-1 by Mexico in the ico second round of Davis cup competition, with Genois the only Canadian winner when he beat Luis Baraldi in three sets of the fifth match.

Official draw for the tournament will be held Oct. 3.

George MacCall, meanwhile, has been dismissed as commissioner of the World Team Tennis League, WTT president Frank Fuhrer announced. In a brief statement, Fuhrer said the dismissal arose out of policy differences between MacCall and the league's executive committee. He did not elaborate.

In football, British Columbia Lions placed Canadian wide receiver Bill Hogan on a five-day trial. Hogan, 24, was released this year by Edmonton Eskimos during exhibition play.

And Winnipeg Blue Bomber general manager Earl Lunsford announced the signing of Mark Gefert, a six-foot-two, 225-pound linebacker from Purdue University. Gefert, drafted this year by the Pittsburgh Steelers, was signed after a five-day trial. Defensive end Mike Dirks was placed on the injured list to make way for Gefert.

In shooting, the Soviet Union fired a world record 2,280 points to edge the United States and win the four-man team gold medal for the men's standard rifle Tuesday at the world championships. The United States, which had dominated rifle shooting since the 38th world events in Cairo in 1962, scored 2,278 for the silver medal, while Norway was third. Herman Saucer of South Africa won the men's individual event with 576 points.

Chemainus Dam Meeting Set Tuesday in Duncan

Some rambling notes along the trail:

Art Morton, one of four members of an action committee formed to battle construction of a mainstem water storage dam on the Chemainus River, reports a meeting has been called for 8 p.m. next Tuesday to acquaint members of the general public with the situation . . . The meeting will be held in the Duncan Eagles' Hall, located behind Buckerfields' store on the left side of the Island Highway just before crossing the Cowichan River heading up-Island . . . Plan to be there, we might just stop this thing yet.

Daryll Herbert, regional wildlife biologist for Vancouver Island, sent me some rather startling figures in response to a query about the 1974 spring carryover count . . . The carryover count, conducted and compiled a little late this year, determines the number of deer surviving from the previous year . . . As Daryll says: "Spring carryover counts are affected by hunting, but on Vancouver Island they are especially affected by habitat destruction and winter snow" . . . In the past 15 years there has been a definite declining trend, reflecting perhaps the increased cutting of timber required by deer for winter range . . . The figures, in per cent, are 1961 (34.0), '62 (37.2), '63 (34.0), '64 (27.8), '65 (25.0), '66 (26.6), '67 (27.9), '68 (28.9), '69 (16.1 — a bad winter), '70 (22.1), '71 (18.4), '72 and '73 (not available) and '74 (25.9).

Rayonier Canada has just released a brochure giving details on how to reach four trails, a picnic site and a wildlife reserve on southern Vancouver Island . . The trails provide access to Juan de Fuca Viewpoint (about 14.5 miles past Sooke), Sandcut Beach (about 17 miles past Sooke), Mystic Beach (3.7 miles past River Jordan) . . . The picnic site is situated on the Jordan River and the wildlife reserve is located near Honeymoon Bay on Cowichan Lake.

Sweden is proposing a rather unique approach to identifying ships responsible for oil spills . . . It seems the metal used to construct a ship has unique characteristics and, just as no two people have identical fingerprints, no two ships have exactly the same type of metal. . . . Sweden's Environmental Protection Board proposes that sample metal scrapings be taken from every ship afloat . . . Analysis of oil found floating anywhere will then reveal traces of metal from the guilty ship.

Anybody going on a hunting trip to the northern Interior is reminded it is compulsory to stop at the Cache Creek checking station . . . The station is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week except between the hours of 11 p.m. Tuesday and 7 a.m. Wednesday of each week . . . Information obtained from hunters at this station, now in its 28th year of operation, helps wildlife biologists in their studies and management programs . . . This goes ditto for any other game check.

Richmond, Delta, Surrey and Langley will be the site of a Special Licence Hunting Area developed by the fish and wildlife branch with the co-operation of the four municipal governments, land owners and sportsmen's groups . . . A special licence ($5 in addition to the regular provincial hunting licence) will be required and hunters will also have to be in possession of $100,000 public liability insurance before the licence is issued to hunt in the four areas . . . It may seem like a lot to pay but I'd say the entire future of hunting in the lower Mainland area depends on the success of this project . . . And, considering the cost of everything else these days, the price of the pleasure is cheap.

Willie's Hit Sinks Cards

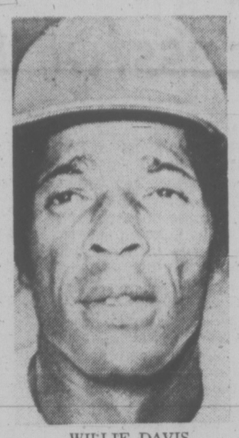
By The Associated Press

Despite an injured wrist, Willie Stargell managed a three-run homer Tuesday night to lead Pittsburgh Pirates to a 7-3 win over St. Louis Cardinals and a one-half game over the Cards at the top of the National League East.

In the West Division, Los Angeles' widened its lead as the Dodgers beat Atlanta Braves 2-1 in 10 innings. They remain five games ahead of Cincinnati Reds and reduced their pennant-clinching number to three.

In other National League games, Cincinnati beat Houston Astros 5-1, Philadelphia Phillies downed New York Mets 6-3, San Diego Padres edged San Francisco Giants 3-2 and, in a double-header, Chicago Cubs beat, Montreal 6-4 before the Expos bounced back to romp 11-2 in the second game.

Stargell had been hit on the right wrist by a pitch in the sixth inning, but by the seventh inning, the pain was the furthest thing from Willie's mind as he hit his 24th homer of the year.



WILLIE DAVIS
. . . three-run blast

John Curtis stymied Pittsburgh on three hits before singles by Rennie Stennett and Manny Sanguillen got the Buos going into the sixth.

Stargell was hit by a pitch to load the bases, Stennett scored on Richie Zisk's grounder, walks to Bob Robertson and Richie Hebner shoved the Pirates on top 2-1 before Parker got his hit.

In the seventh, Stennett and Al Oliver singled before Stargell unloaded his homer to left-centre field off Rich Folkers.

The Dodgers can clinch a tie for the West Divsion crown in their last home game tonight.

"It would be great to do it at home." said Ron Cey, whose eighth-inning home run brought the Dodgers into a 1-1 eighthinning tie.

Knuckleballer Phil Niekro had one-hit Los Angeles before Cey homered. Then, in the 10th, Steve Yeager doubled with two out, the Dodgers loaded the bases on two walks and Yeager dashed home when catcher Johnny Oates couldn't handle one of Niekro's fluttering pitches.

Johnny Bench signalled for a hit-and-run play, then did both, breaking a tie with a triple in a three-run fifth inning to help the Reds defeat Houston and keep alive Cincinnati's flickering pennant hopes.

Joe Morgan walked before Bench belted his three-bagger. Bench then came home on Milt May's passed ball, Dan Driessen singled, moved to second on an infield out and scored on Dave Concepcion's single.

Larry Bowa banged out three hits and knocked in two runs while Greg Luzinski hit a three-run homer in the Phillies' victory over New York.

Pinch-hitter John Grubb's sacrifice fly in the seventh inning lifted the Padres over San Francisco.

Willie Davis knocked in four runs, three with a homer, and Gerry Carter drove in three to give Montreal a split after Rick Monday and Bill Madlock hit two home runs apiece in the Cubs' first-game victory.

FANNING DENIES DAVIS ON BLOCK

MONTREAL (CP) — General manager Jim Fanning said today he has not been actively involved in an attempt to trade Willie Davis, the veteran centre fielder obtained by Montreal Expos this year from Los Angeles Dodgers.

"I have made no effort to trade him," Fanning said in an interview. "I have not fade one call to another club about him nor have I received one."

Reports here indicated that Davis, who came here in exchange for relief ace Mike Marshall before the start of the current National League season, was a sure bet to be with another team next year.

"That doesn't mean that his name hasn't been brought up," Fanning said. "I have had general conversations with other managers covering our respective rosters, but that's all."

Fanning said that outside of "some young players anybody on our club, including Davis" would be available after the seasons ends.

Bunt Boosts Orioles

By The Associated Press

A tie-breaking squeeze bunt by Andy Etchebarren brought Brooks Robinson home from third base, catapulting Baltimore Orioles past New York Yankees and into first place Tuesday night in the American League East.

Etchebarren's squeeze bunt allowed Robinson to score the winning run in the eighth inning and gave the Orioles a 5-4 victory over Detroit Tigers. The Yankees, who started the day with a one-game lead, dropped a twi-night doubleheader to Boston Red Sox 4-0 and 4-2 and fell to second place.

Baltimore's climb to the top of the AL East took some of the glamor away from Detroit's Al Kaline, whose fourth-inning double made him the 12th player in major league history to reach 3,000 hits for his career.

Elsewhere ine the American League, Milwaukee Brewers nipped Cleveland Indians 4-3 in 11 innings, California Angels defeated Kansas City Royals 9-3 and Oakland A's trimmed Minnesota Twins 5-1. Chicago White Sox' doubleheader at Texas Rangers was rained out.

Trailing 4-3 after seven innings, the Orioles tied the score on doubles by Don Baylor and Robinson in the eighth. Robinson moved to third on a wild pitch prior to Etchebarren's bunt.

Etchebarren, got his bat on the high curve-ball from Tigers' relief ace John Hiller and tapped the ball down the first base line. There was no play on Robinson, who scored with the winning run, and Etchebarren even beat it out for single.

The Yankees were stopped on six hits by Luis Tiant in the opener and on seven hits by Roger Moret in the nightcap.

The Orioles have seven games to go and the Yankees six in the regular season, which ends next Wednesday.

Boston, in third place, is 3½ games behind the Orioles.

The second game was marred by rowdyism among some of the 46,448 at Shea Stadium in New York. Debris was hurled onto the field, including a bottle which splattered near home plate.

Gene Tenace's third grand-slam home run of the season helped the A's stretch their lead in the AL West to five games over Texas.

BARTON INJURED

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Greg Barton, Portland Storm's No. 2 quarterback, formerly a Toronto Argonaut, has cracked three ribs and will be sidelined for one to three weeks.

Al Kaline's Double Earns Immortality

BALTIMORE (AP) — Al Kaline achieved baseball immortality before the fans of his native Baltimore, but the Detroit Tigers' star was perhaps the calmest person in Memorial Stadium.

The 39-year-old veteran was given a rousing ovation by the slim crowd of 13,817 when he doubled in the fourth inning of Tuesday night's game to become the 12th player in major league history to reach the 3,000-hit plateau.

The game was halted for appropriate ceremonies honoring the occasion, but Kaline remained cool. He delivered a run-scoring single in the sixth, forging a 2-2 tie with the Orioles.

After Baltimore rallied for a crucial 5-4 victory in the American League's tight Eastern Division race, Kaline said the defeat was the only damper on the whole evening.

Referring to the reaching of his goal, Kaline said: "I'm happy it's over with, but I'm sorry we didn't win. That would have capped perfectly."

Detroit's designated hitter, once one of the game's best outfielders, had said this would be his final season if he reached the exclusive milestone. He didn't want to risk having a freak injury stand in his way.

"I would have much preferred to have gotten the hit in Detroit," he said. "But since it couldn't be Detroit, I'm glad it was here. My parents, my sister, my wife's parents and a lot of friends were here."

Playing in his 2,827th game, Kaline rapped out hit No. 3,000 in his 10,089th time at bat. It was his 498th double and the 972nd extra base hit of his career.

Cowichan Side Tops Edinburgh

DUNCAN — Edinburgh University ended its three-game exhibition rugby visit to Vancouver Island in defeat here Tuesday night.

The Scottish students went down 18-12 to Cowichan of the Victoria Rugby Union's first divison before a large crowd at McAdam Park.

That left them with a 1-2 win-loss record. Edinburgh crashed 25-0 in the opener a week ago to University of Victoria Vikings and then defeated a second-division all-star team 21-6 Saturday in Nanaimo.

Winger Wes Thomas played well for Cowichan, scoring two tries. Gaither Zinkan and Pat Simmons also scored tries and Simmons kicked one conversion.

Centre Peter Gray scored a try for the visitors and was awarded a penalty try when he was tripped near the Cowichan line. Standoff-half Ken McKenzie, the team captain, scored the other points with two conversions.

The Scottish team ends its tour with matches in Vancouver against Georgians and University of British Columbia Thunderbirds.

ALL-ROUND sports performer Wendy La Fave (above) is a finalist in the summer-long Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis Tournament, which winds up Saturday at Henderson Parks courts. Wendy, 16, who went to S. J. Willis Junior High School and now attends Vic High, plays Linda Weech in girls' singles final at 3 p.m. Tennis plays only one part in Wendy's athletic life. She is also on Vic High and YWCA volleyball teams, has played field hockey, basketball, badminton and has bowled.

Finnish Goalie Makes A Successful Debut

By The Canadian Press

Jorma Valtonen, who only a week ago played goal for Finland's national side against a team from Russia, made a successful debut with Pittsburgh at Peterborough, Ont., as the Penguins defeated New York Islanders 4-2 Tuesday night in one of two National Hockey League exhibition games.

In the other game, played at Moncton, N.B., goaltender Wayne Thomas was not quite as impressive as Montreal Canadiens lost 5-2 to Atlanta Flames.

In the only World Hockey Association match, at Brtndon, Man., Phoenix Roadrunners, an expansion team, defeated Winnipeg Jets 3-1 for their third consecutive victory.

While Valtonen warded off 24 shots by the Islanders, Don Seiling led the Penguins offence with two goals and two assists. Seiling was a last-minute replacement for veteran Vic Hadfield, who suffered a pulled groin muscle in scrimmage.

Dave Burrows and Rick Kehoe scored the other goals for the Penguins who raised their pre-season record to three wins and one defeat.

The Islanders, who have only one tie in three games, got goals from Ernie Hicke and Gary Howatt.

The Flames capitalized on shaky goaltending by Thomas to overpower the Canadiens, scoring four goals against him after he replaced Ken Dryden midway through the game.

Jerry Byers, Kurt Bennett, Lucien Grenier, Jacques Richard and Leon Rochefort scored for Atlanta, with Montreal goals provided by Ivan Cournoyer and Guy Lapointe.

Backfired Pass Beats Vikings

A clearing attempt that failed cost the University of Victoria Vikings the McGavin Cup Tuesday night.

Vikngs were tied 1-1 with Victoria West in the final of the Vancouver Island Soccer League premier-division eight-team knockout even at Royal Athletic Park when they made the defensive blunder.

Two minutes from the end, fullback Jim Marshall jumped up to clear a high ball and headed it back into his own net to give Vic West a 2-1 win and the cup.

Vikings had been in charge in the first half and took a 1-0 lead on Mark Robb's goal at the 16-minute mark but the Wests came on strongly in the second half and Robbie Williams got the equalizer after 69 minutes.

SCOTTISH GIRLS LOSE TO UVIC

Jodi Hunter scored in the first minute of play Tuesday to give University of Victoria Vicettes a 1-0 decision over University of Edinburgh in an international women's field hockey exhibition match at UVic.

The loss left the Scottish club with one win, two defeats and a draw in four matches against clubs from the Vancouver Island Ladies' Field Hockey Association.

Edinburgh now travels to Vancouver for matches against Simon Fraser University, B.C. Juniors and the University of British Columbia before heading home next Tuesday.

Centres Diane Whittingham on UVic and Kathy Dodd of Edinburgh played outstanding games.

Edge to Kings But Tigers Win

MEDICINE HAT (CP) — Medicine Hat Tigers withstood a furious Edmonton Oil King attack Tuesday night and went on to defeat the Oil Kings 7-5 in a Western Canada Junior Hockey League exhibition game.

Although outshot 55-28, Tigers held period leads of 3-2 and 6-4 en route to their third win in five exhibition starts.

Rookie Jeff Boychuk sparked the Medicine Hat attack with two goals and others were by Elmer Ray, Morris Lukowich, Don Murdoch, Greg Vaydik and Tom Bast. Wayne Perkins with two, Wayne Babych, Doug Letuyer and Gary Rissling scored for the Oil Kings.

Pats Win Third

REGINA (CP) — Regina Pats won their third Western Canada Hockey League exhibition game in five starts Tuesday night as they drubbed Flin Flon Bombers 8-3.

The loss was the sixth in a row for the Bombers, who played the game without coach Mel Pearson. Pearson was sitting out the second game of a two-game suspension and injured defenceman Jerry Rollins handled the coaching chores.

Jim Minor and Rob Tudor led the Pats with two goals each as Regina held period leads of 2-0 and 5-2.

Ken Burdon, Al Dumba, Mike Hogan and Dick Van Der Velden scored the other Regina goals. Rich Gosselin, with two, and Scott Williams replied for the Bombers.

Blades Tie Broncos

SASKATOON (CP) — Danny Arndt's second goal of the game gave Saskatoon Blades a 4-4 tie with Lethbridge Broncos Tuesday night.

Rookies Win Winofsky and Bruce Hamilton scored the other goals for Saskatoon, who held a first period-lead of 1-0.

Bryan Trottier, Doug Tetarenko, Ron Delorme and Stan Jensen scored for the Broncos.

Dupont Leads Way

CHILLIWACK, (CP) — Chilliwack Bruins, behind the two-goal performance of Butch Dupont, defeated Langley Lords 7-4 Tuesday in a B.C. Junior Hockey League exhibition game.

Randy Ruff, Tim Hollett, Tom O'Neill, Jim Slater and Steve McDonald completed the Bruins' scoring.

Sandy Bain led Langley with two goals. Singles were scored by Lane Lavick and Ryan Walter.

Field Hockey Race Close Among Girls

Oak Bay and Norfolk House have both scored nine goals and have both had no goals scored against them so far in the Greater Vicotria High School Girls Field Hockey League — but there's a difference.

Oak Bay, which blanked Mt. Douglas 1-0 on Sherri Sudlow's goal Tuesday, has scored its nine goals in three games and leads the league. Norfolk house has scored its nine goals in only two games and Nina Bland has fired in eight of them.

In Tuesday's other games, Vic High shut out Spectrum 2-0 on Lesley Godfrey's goal, Leslie Howe scored twice to give Claremont a 2-0 win over Belmont and Dunsmuir trounced Parkland 5-0. For Dunsmuir, it was Diane Stewart with two goals and Heather Banks, Joanne Ridley and Cathy Seniak with one goal each.

WFL Drowning In Red Ink

By The Associated Press

A flash flood of red ink has drowned three World Football League franchises in the last week.

Seven days ago Houston Texans, uable to obtain sufficient financial backing, were moved to Shreveport, La., and renamed The Steamer.

Not much later the league was forced to assume operation of Jacksonville Sharks, who will receive their first pay cheques in close to five weeks tonight before their game against Southern California Sun.

On Tuesday, New York Stars were moved to Charlotte, N.C., and Detroit Wheels—already funded by the league for the last few weeks—filed a bankruptcy petition in U.S. District Court with outstanding debts of $2.5 million.

The moves by Houston and New York were the seventh and eighth shifts in the 12-team league's brief history. Earlier, Toronto Northmen moved to Memphis; the original Memphis team shifted to Houston before cruising on to Shreveport; the Washington franchise travelled to Alexandria, Va., then Orlando, Fla.; Boston moved to New York before its latest trip to Charlotte; and the charter New York franchise crossed the continent to Portland.

The geographic hopscotch may not be over. Detroit coach Dan Boisture noted that the Wheels had been the original team intended for Charlotte.

"We thought we might move to Charlotte. Now there is some talk about Louisville," Boisture said Tuesday night when his club lost 37-7 to the Stars after learning its owners had succumbed financially.

The sale of the Stars to Boston investor Upton Bell was to be announced officially today at news conferences in New York and Charlotte.

RALLY NOT ENOUGH, BOXLA SERIES TIED

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (CP) — Rochester Griffins rallied for seven goals in the third period Tuesday night, but lost, 11-10, to Philadelphia as the Wings tied the National Lacrosse League finals at 2-2 before 1614 fans.

The fifth game of the best-of-seven series will be played in Philadelphia Thursday, with the sixth schedule for Rochester Saturday.

Larry Lloyd paced the wings with four goals while Len Powers scored for Rochester, which also got a goal from Glen Neuman of Victoria.

Not much later the league was forced to assume operation of Jacksonville Sharks, who will receive their first pay cheques in close to five weeks tonight before their game against Southern California Sun.

On Tuesday, New York Stars were moved to Charlotte, N.C., and Detroit Wheels—already funded by the league for the last few weeks—filed a bankruptcy petition in U.S. District Court with outstanding debts of $2.5 million.

The moves by Houston and New York were the seventh and eighth shifts in the 12-team league's brief history. Earlier, Toronto Northmen moved to Memphis; the original Memphis team shifted to Houston before cruising on to Shreveport; the Washington franchise travelled to Alexandria, Va., then Orlando, Fla.; Boston moved to New York before its latest trip to Charlotte; and the charter New York franchise crossed the continent to Portland.

The geographic hopscotch may not be over. Detroit coach Dan Boisture noted that the Wheels had been the original team intended for Charlotte.

"We thought we might move to Charlotte. Now there is some talk about Louisville," Boisture said Tuesday night when his club lost 37-7 to the Stars after learning its owners had succumbed financially.

The sale of the Stars to Boston investor Upton Bell was to be announced officially today at news conferences in New York and Charlotte.

Gov't Office Centre Sought By Seniors

James Bay senior citizens want the use of the Cathedral School at 520 Niagara for an activity centre, even if it means "biting the hand that feeds us," city aldermen were told Tuesday.

A delegation from the James Bay New Horizons Group stressed that the Cathedral School now occupied by the James Bay office of the human resources department is the only centrally-located building in James Bay with a hall large enough to accommodate the group's 700 members.

The New Horizons representatives asked for an early decision from city council to buy the building with funds from the Neighborhood Improvement Program for James Bay.

President H. J. Stephenson said other locations suggested, including Beacon Hill school, are unsuitable as an activity centre because elderly members would have too far to walk.

He also said the group would prefer to be in its own quarters, running its own affairs, rather than be part of a multi-use activity centre as has been proposed for the area.

"I can't see a successful mingling of teenagers and ourselves," he added.

Stephenson said it was unfortunate that the human resources department would be "ousted" if the former church school were acquired for the group, but there appeared no alternative.

With proper accommodation, the New Horizons organization could relieve some of the pressure on the Silver Threads centre in Centennial Square, he told the committee.

Ald. Percy Frampton, chairman of the neighborhood improvement committee, assured the delegation council would consider would consider their proposal.

Disabled Step Up Facilities Push

A group of physically handicapped Victorians has decided it can't wait for help from the non-handicapped, so members are taking steps to provide their own facilities and to have existing ones improved for their use.

The group has established there is a lack of activity outlets for disabled adults and plans to form an organization led by persons who know of the problems firsthand because of personal disabilities.

A meeting is scheduled for Sunday, at 7 p.m. at the Henderson Pavilion, 2291 Cedar Hill Cross Road, open to handicapped adults and others interested in assisting or advising the group.

"We are going to discuss architectural barriers in public buildings including places of entertainment, restaurants and shopping centres," Donna Pistell said Tuesday.

"Training and employment and other problems" will also be discussed, she said.

Disabled persons are not made to feel as welcome as other guests in restaurants, for example, where chairs are placed too close together to allow for wheelchairs, and furniture must be shifted to accommodate the handicapped, a group spokesman said.

Ramps are seldom provided in theatres and shops, she said, making it more difficult for the disabled to move freely in town.

Turk Leader Blocked

ANKARA (Reuter) — Caretaker Premier Bulent Ecevit suffered a serious setback in his attempt to form a new Turkish government Tuesday night when the Democratic party rejected his proposals for a coalition.

The right-wing party rejected Ecevit's offer to join a government to lead Turkey to early elections next December.

He told reporters it appeared the party will not even consider an alternative election date and has ruled out joining an administration with his Republican People's party.

Ecevit, the man who ordered Turkey's invasion of Cyprus, resigned last week because of a split in his coalition. He is continuing in office in a caretaker capacity.

It was not clear what Ecevit's next political move would be. There was speculation he may try to form a minority government or give up his attempt to set up an administration.

N-Test Arranged

LAS VEGAS (AP) — An underground nuclear test with a yield of between 20,000 and 200,000 tons of TNT will be conducted Thursday at the Nevada test site, the Atomic Energy Commission announced Tuesday. The test is the seventh announced this year and the 264th announced since signing of the limited test ban treaty in 1963.

Merchant Navy Eyed for Canada

MONTREAL (CP) — New proposals for regulation of international cargo shipping may force Canada into setting up its own merchant fleet, a federal transport adviser said Monday.

The proposals, approved last April in Geneva by a convention of 95 countries under United Nations auspices, emphasize a bilateral sharing of cargo vessel trade, said G. M. Schuthe.

Competition among shipping lines that held freight rates down and made it advantageous for Canada to rely on foreign vessels could be reduced if the proposals are signed into international law, he told a Canadian Shippers' Council seminar.

"One approach might be for the Canadian government to foster the revival of a Canadian deep sea merchant marine by offering incentives necessary to encourage private investment in liner shipping," Schuthe said.

"Another might be to build ships — probably container ships — at public expense to be managed in the Canadian interest and placed in liner conference operations.

Schuthe and other speakers agreed that there are good and bad provisions in the Code of Conduct for Liner Conferences, overwhelmingly approved at the Geneva meeting and opened to ratification by member nations on July 1.

The Canadian delegation abstained in the voting and said in a final statement to the convention that the code could reduce liner competition and is "evidently designed to further the development of merchant marines" rather than to protect exporters.

Schuthe said developing countries with fledgling merchant marines had found it difficut to capture a share of trade controlled by powerful shipping conferences and so had begun to think in terms of allocating cargo.

Milk Subsidy Drop 'Nutrition Threat'

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumers will buy less milk than they need for proper nutrition if the government removes its five-cents-a-quart milk subsidy, the food prices review board warned Tuesday.

In a statement, the board said removal of the year-old $108-million subsidy would impose "an undesirably heavy burden on Canadian consumers."

"Milk is an essential food and price increases in the order of 20 per cent will discourage its adequate consumption.

"This constitutes a threat to the nutrition and good health of Canadian families."

The board said it realized the need to restrain government spending because of the "intensity of current inflationary pressures," adding it was also aware of federal arguments that the subsidy could end because family allowance and other payments now are being increased as living costs rise.

But it said it regretted the government's decision to end the subsidy now, when consumers are being faced with a number of food price increases.

The board urged the government to extend the subsidy until inflationary pressures ease and a long-term dairy policy is adopted or, at a minimum, to extend to 12 from four months the period during which the subsidy gradually will be ended.

As well, it said the subsidy should be administered by consumer affairs rather than the agriculture department.

The report followed a regular monthly meeting of the board and included comments on the bread-price situation.

The board said it noted with particular concern the "severe price increases" for both bread and milk.

It was carrying out a bakery-by-bakery, company-by-company review to see whether bread price increases were justified. It would not hesitate to make a public report in cases where such increases appeared to be unwarranted.

The milk subsidy was intended to last only one year when the Trudeau government implemented it in the fall of 1973 to offset rising costs.

But in August this year, Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan announced it would be gradually reduced — one cent a month — during a four-month period running from the anniversary date of the program in each province.

Showdown for Seniors Air Wreck Probed

SASKATOON (CP) — Saskatoon's senior citizens are to get the "showdown" meeting they requested with federal and provincial officials to try to gain a $200 a month pension increase, it was announced Monday.

A two-day meeting has been scheduled Saturday and Sunday at the Centennial Auditorium.

Joe Phelps, vice-president of the Saskatchewan Senior Citizens Action Now Group, said both levels of government are "too slow" in reacting to the plight of senior citizens.

STE. THERESE, Que. (UPI) — Police and Department of Transport officials Tuesday sifted through the wreckage of a twin-engine Cessna aircraft that crashed near here Monday, killing four persons.

The light aircraft crashed in a wooded area near here about 15 minutes after it had taken off.

Gamble Could Reduce Bread Prices

OTTAWA (CP) — The price of a loaf of bread could be reduced two cents if all bakers refused to buy old bread back from retailers, but bakery spokesmen agreed Tuesday it was a risky business.

Peter Wygant, president of General Bakeries Ltd., said in an interview that his company had stopped buying back old bread from its retailers 19 months ago, adding:

"All grocers, large and small, would rather that the baker pick up the bread. If one baker does take back all stales then the tendency is for the store to do business with that baker. We took some real gambles when we did this."

Still, he said, the move created an additional profit of about two per cent for the company by not having to have trucks picking up the bread and then having to find a buyer for it at a thrift store or as pig feed.

"The meat packers don't take back old meat, produce suppliers don't take back unsold vegetables," Wygant said.

What the company now does is grant the stores a five per cent credit for bread over three days old and let the store sell it as it can.

The move is in line with a suggestion from the federal food prices review board last February. So far only General Bakeries has made the move.

Both Victor Usaki, executive vice-president of Weston Bakeries Ltd., in Toronto and Jean Piggott, president of Morrison Lamothe Foods Ltd., here agree that the general move was the right one.

FORT McMURRAY, Alta. (CP) — A helicopter which failed to arrive was located just north of the town Tuesday night following a military and civilian search. The pilot, who was on a three-hour flight from Fort Smith, N.W.T., advised by radio that he had run out of fuel and landed on a river bank.

CALGARY (CP) — Beer delivery workers in Calgary staged a brief work stoppage Tuesday in a dispute over the interpretation of a clause in a contract signed with the Alberta Brewers' Agents Ltd. last week. The men returned to work after discussing for about two hours the company's hiring of a temporary employee.

EDMONTON (CP) — An Alberta government task force reviewing venereal disease in the province will also examine the high incidence of gonorrhea in this city. Last year, Edmonton recorded 3,960 cases of the disease, more than double Calgary's total of 1,653 cases. The only two cities to register higher totals were Toronto with 4,846 recorded cases and Vancouver with 4,987. Edmonton's syphilis rate — 58 cases compared with Calgary's 32 — was in line with other Canadian cities. The city's social hygiene division found no concrete reason for the apparent high rate here.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Mayor Stephen Juba will seek the mayoralty for an unprecendented ninth term in civic elections Oct. 23. Juba, 60, said he again will run as a political independent. So far only one opponent has stepped forward for the mayoralty, Brenda Dineen, 26, a candidate of the Socialist Action League of Canada. Nominations close Oct. 2.

Ford

We're about to bust our seams. There's so much to tell you about our 1975 Fords and Mercurys we can't wait till the 27th.

So here's some advance news we'd like you to know right now!

"ECONOMY EXTENDERS" Important features you will find in every 1975 Ford and Mercury carline.

Fuel economy is becoming increasingly important to all of us. However, fuel economy is governed by many factors, including the driver, driving conditions and engineering design. To help you get the most from your gasoline dollar yet fulfill the more stringent '75 exhaust emission standards, a number of advances were engineered into every Ford and Mercury carline. These advances are called Economy Extenders and we believe the benefits they provide will mean a lot to you.

- Steel belted radial ply tires – extend tread life and reduce rolling friction for better gas mileage.
- Solid state ignition – eliminates the points and condenser and improves fuel economy over long periods due to a more stable spark plug performance.
- Improved engine tuning – improved tuning on many engines results in better fuel economy and performance.
- Optimized rear axle ratios – contribute to less engine wear and lower fuel consumption by proper matching to load and use requirements.
- Extended service intervals – contribute to reduced maintenance requirements and, therefore, lower operating costs.

Refueling Convenience

While some 1975 cars require the use of more expensive unleaded gasoline which is not readily available throughout Canada,* all 1975 Ford and Mercury carlines can be refueled at any station, with any gasoline – unleaded, premium or the lower priced regular gas.

The 1975 Fords: The closer you look, the better we look.

This year, your Ford dealer has a great line-up of cars. The highlight for 1975 is the Ford Granada, an entirely new luxury car especially designed to give you efficient use of space, fuel and money. Granada is one and one half feet shorter and about a quarter-ton lighter than most 1974 mid-size cars so you can expect good gas mileage. Yet there's family room inside.

Along with the new Granada, Ford offers you: Pinto – still the leader in basic transportation. Maverick – the proven family compact. Mustang II – the sporty personal luxury car. Torino – six passenger comfort in a solid mid-size car. Ford Elite – the tradition of Thunderbird in a mid-size car. Ford LTD – a new level of value in a full-size car. Ford LTD Landau – an alternative to more expensive luxury cars. And Thunderbird – unique in all the world.

The 1975 Mercurys: A line of cars built for today's values.

For 1975, your Mercury dealer offers many kinds of cars for many kinds of people.

Leading the line-up is all new 1975 Monarch – the precision size car that's precisely right. It's an exciting achievement in luxury, comfort, room and economy, put together in an entirely new, smaller car tailored for today's driving needs.

Together with Monarch are other exciting Mercury carlines. Comet – the tough compact with a big reputation. Capri – the sexy European. Bobcat – economy with a pedigree. Montego – the car with a full-size ride for a mid-size price. Cougar XR-7 – it's like nobody else's car. Meteor – the solid sensible buy. Marquis – the car that puts luxury well within your reach. And new Grand Marquis – the most luxurious Mercury.

And at Mercury and selected Ford dealers – the luxurious Lincoln Continental, the Continental Town Car and Town Coupé, and the prestigious Continental Mark IV.

Builders Accuse Region Of 'No Growth' Policy

Housebuilders are concerned that the Capital Regional District board is either advocating a "no growth" policy for the end of this century or has made an error in its population forecast.

In a brief made public today, the Victoria branch of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada said the proposed official regional plan for Metropolitan Victoria covers a period of 22 years while major trunk sewers are usually designed for 40 to 50 years.

"What capacities will be designed for? Is there a 'no growth' philosophy being adopted by the regional board members for the years after 1996?"

The brief also says that an earlier draft of the plan projected a population of 367,000 in 27 years, or an increase of 6,340 a year, while the present plan predicts a population of 367,000 in 22 years, or an increase of 7,781 a year.

This difference, HUDAC said, equals some 400 extra housing units a year.

Population adjustments were made in the final draft for North Saanich, Sidney and Central Saanich, it said.

"When all of these points are coinsidered, it appears that adjustments have been made expediently and with diplomatic motives rather than being based on planning studies."

The importance of even minor errors in population forecasting was underscored by HUDAC.

An error of 0.1 per cent compounded over the plan period of 22 years would amount to some 10,000 more people than anticipated which, assuming 3.5 persons per house, would mean an extra 3,000 housing units.

"To express this statement more graphically—an accelerated growth rate of as little as 0.1 per cent would represent the present population of Sidney having to be accounted for and housed.

"Since population projections are the fundamental data for the preparation of a regional plan, how can a meaningful plan be prepared if this fundamental data is inconsistent?"

The HUDAC brief said the basic reason for the high cost of housing is the high price of serviced land and the only way this can be overcome is by making more serviced land available.

But, it added, the Saanich sewer enterprise area was proclaimed in 1968 as making available, when completely serviced in five years, enough land for 17 years growth but "it is apparent that this 17-year figure was hopelessly optimistic."

The brief also said the official regional plan "does not allow an adequate degree of flexibility" for future development of local areas and that establishing "arbitrary maximum standards" of 350,000 square feet for regional shopping centres outside downtown is not "acceptable, desirable or wholly workable."

Meanwhile, two municipalities have made submissions to the regional board.

North Saanich said simply that council has endorsed the proposed regional plan.

Of concern to Oak Bay was:

Removal of certain mandatory provisions from the earlier plan which "may lessen the effectiveness of the plan" and "the official plan should perhaps go further in the direction of locating population growth areas;"

Deletion of the transportation part of the draft plan with regard to traffic forecast. The plan should spell out in more detail concern for establishing a better transportation system "to lessen dependency upon the private automobile," council suggests.

Rotary Engine Stalled

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. has decided to delay the introduction of its revolutionary rotary engine, the long-awaited alternative to the piston engine that now powers all U.S. cars.

President Edward N. Cole announced the decision Tuesday — one week after another GM executive said the company would introduce the rotary engine next April in its sporty Monza 2 plus 2 model.

The change of plans, Cole said, was caused by the need for more emission control development and concern about future federal emission standards.

There was no indication when a GM car would join the Japanese-made Mazda as the only cars on the market equipped with the rotary engine.

A Mazda spokesman said the GM decision would not affect its own plans. The company expects to sell nearly 80,000 of the rotary powered cars this year.

GM paid $50 million for the right to manufacture and sell the rotary engine and will make the final $5 million instalment payment in December.

The engine, called the Wankel engine by some, was first built in 1957 by a West German, Dr. Felix Wankel, whose basic design was changed and simplified later by another engineer.

TOURIST TRADE HOT AGAIN

Victoria's tourist trade picked up with September's heat, countering a slow start in a wet July, according to the Visitors' Information Centre.

More than 600 visitors asked for information at the Centre last Saturday, said an official, compared with 250-300 on the coresponding day last year.

"The weather is definitely having an effect, "and tourism is not dropping off yet."

Motel business "has been better than in June," said one motel desk clerk, and it's only starting to decrease now.

For the early part of the summer, car traffic at Swartz Bay ran 12 per cent above that for 1973, with the number of recreation and camper vehicles up 18 pr cent and tour buses up 21 per cent.

Passenger counts at Tsawwassen increased 15.5 per cent over 1973, and the bus passenger count was also up.

Visits by major cruise ships totalled 27, bringing 17,800 additional visitors to the city.

Charter Loss Fears Keep Canadians Out of Air Group

TORONTO (CP) — Three Canadian charter airlines have refused an invitation to join the international organization of scheduled airlines because they say it would hurt lower-price charter business.

George Curley, an executive with Wardair Canada Ltd., said Tuesday his company "couldn't see any advantages in joining the 111-member International Air Transport Association IATA, a group that sets international fares and standards of service.

"We have managed to grow because we could offer low prices for flights overseas. The whole idea of asking us to join IATA is so they can raise our prices to meet theirs and undercut us," Mr. Curley said.

He said Wardair will announce next week transatlantic fare increases for the spring "in the neighborhood of eight to 10 per cent" and would be forced to increase fares more if they joined IATA.

TransAir and Pacific Western Airlines have refused IATA's invitation outright while Nordair said it will reserve its decision until it learns about conditions of the invitation.

New Stamps Boost Sports

OTTAWA (CP) — The post office will put out 34 new stamps in 1975, including four issues of Olympic stamps, Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey announced Tuesday.

Water and combat sports will be featured in the two issues of surcharged Olympic stamps. The extra charge is destined for the fund for the 1976 Olympic Games in Montreal.

The issues will be put out in their regular eight-cent, 10-cent and 15-cent denominations with an extra levy of two cents on the eight-cent stamp and five cents on the 10-and 15-cent stamps.

Bronze sculptures of athletes in action by Dr. Robert Tait McKenzie, physical educator and sculptor, will be featured on $1 and $2 Olympic commemoratives. Track and field events will be depicted on those of 20, 25 and 50 cents.

Other stamps will honor Lucy Maud Montgomery, the author of Anne of Green Gables; Robert Service, the Yukon poet; Marguerite Bourgeoys, founder of the Order of Notre Dame; Alphonse Desjardins, leader of the credit union movement; John Cook, first moderator of the Presbyterian Church in Canada; and Samuel Dwight Chown, a leading founder of the United Church of Canada.

The 100th anniversary of the Supreme Court of Canada and the 50th anniversary of the Royal Canadian Legion will be commemorated and a special stamp will be released to mark International Women's Year.

Four stamps will be issued in honor of the subarctic Indians and four others will depict Canadian coastal ships.

Rocky No Lender

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Nelson Rockefeller said today that both Spiro Agnew and John Ehrlichman asked him for financial help after scandal forced them from the government last year, but he refused.

Rockefeller told the senate rules committee during the third day of hearings on his nomination that Agnew called him seeking help "in connection with a book — asking for someone to finance payments in advance on a book."

"I did not help," Rockefeller said.

"I also received two letters from John Ehrlichman for his defence fund," Rockefeller said.

"From the human point of view I'm embarrassed to say I did not answer these letters. From the human point of view these things are very sad."

Rockefeller also said he never contributed any money to the Committee to Re-Elect the President, Nixon's campaign organization which became deeply involved in the Watergate scandal.

He also replied "No" to the question of whether funds "from you or your family were used to disrupt the 1972 Democratic national convention?"

Rockefeller planned to wind up his testimony today. Then, the committee will hear from a group of Senate and House of Represenatiatives members before turning to spokesmen of various groups who oppose the former New York governor.

House judiciary committee hearings on the nomination probably will not start until after the Nov. 5 election, meaning Rockefeller will not win full congressional confirmation until late in the year at the earliest.

At the close of Tuesday's session, committee members say they see nothing so far to block Rockefeller's confirmation.

"As of right now I see nothing that could block confirmation," chairman Howard Cannon (Dem.—Nev.) told reporters. "I'd agree with that," said assistant senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia.

The two have led the sharpest questioning of the multi-millionaire nominee.

Drowning Inquiry Set

COWICHAN (CP) — An inquiry has been ordered into the death of a Saskatchewan man who drowned Sunday when he and five friends were attempting to navigate the Cowichan River on Vancouver Island in an inner tube.

The body of Alvin John Harris, 22, of Mair was recovered Sunday, less than two hours after friends reported his disappearance.

RCMP said the victim was wearing a lifejacket when the group encountered rapids. The tube was ripped away and his body was found trapped in rocks.

Nanaimo Unity Vote Slated

NANAIM O— October 26 is the date set for a vote on the question of the amalgamation of Greater Nanaimo into one city.

A Greater Nanaimo would involve a population of 45,000 — triple the city's present population.

The boundaries of the new city would be extended to include Lantzville, all of Wellington, Northfield and Departure Bay, and parts of the Mountain, Chase River, Extension and Cedar districts.

Ocean Resource Study Ordered

The provincial government has commissioned a $40,000 study of marine resources, Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk said Tuesday.

The study, to be carried out by Underwood, McLellan and Associates Ltd., is the first in a series of 16 economic development studies to be pursued by his department, he said in a news release.

The marine resources study will concentrate on shrimp, groundfish, herring and marine flora.

The minister said the economic development studies will deal with social and environmental considerations as well as economic aspects.

Aviator Dies

AGEN, France (Reuter) — Rene Drouillet, 76, co-founder of France's first air mail service and a longtime aviator, died today of injuries received in a car accident.

ICBC Unions Snub Merger Plan

The three unions involved in battle to represent Insurance Corporation of B.C. employees were unable to agree Tuesday to formation of a joint council.

The meeting of the three unions, which followed one in Labor Minister Bill King's office Monday, resulted in the Canadian Union of Uublic Employees and the B.C. Government Employees Union agreeing to form a joint council on a voluntary basis.

But the Office and Technical Employees Union said it cannot agree to join such a council "at this point in time."

The three unions had started out separately some months ago to organize the 1,400 employees.

But CUPE and BCGEU amalgamated their forces to form the Association of ICBC Employees.

The Labor Relations Board ordered a representation vote with this association on the ballot but OTEU was left off because it did not have sufficient support.

This position apparently changed while the vote was in progress and the LRB called for a second vote with both the association and OTEU on the ballot. This vote has yet to be held.

Fred Trotter, president of OTEU Local 378, said today his union believes the second vote should go ahead so the employees themselves can decide which way they want to go.

"We believe the employees have a right to cast a vote," he said. "The joint council is premature until we see what the wishes of the employees are."

He said his union represents a majority of employees in the ICBC head office in Vancouver and a "sizeable number" in the claims offices throughout B.C.

Trotter said if the IRB proceeds with the second vote and it goes in favor of the association, his union will not contest the decision and will urge all employees to supprt the association.

If neither the association nor OTEU gets a majority "then Local 378 will support formation of a voluntary council of unions."

The LRB has the power to order formation of joint councils of unions under Section 57 of the Labor Code, on application of one or more unions or on its own motion.

CHILD LIT $2,000 BLAZE

A child playing with matches caused a fire in a house at 1280 Balmoral Tuesday morning, Victoria deputy fire chief R. J. Coates said today.

Coates said about $2,000 damage was caused. The fire broke out at 9:13 a.m.

Firemen were on the scene for 40 minutes and contained the blaze to the basement.

Damage was done to the ceiling, walls, floor, windows and door in one section.

The occupants of the house are Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Bragg.

Total donors for Monday and Tuesday was 303.

The clinic ends today at Camosun College.

CIGARETTE PRICE UP

MONTREAL (CP) — MacDonald Tobacco Inc., announced Tuesday a price increase to wholesalers of 67 cents per 1,000 cigarettes.

In a statement, G. Dee Smith, the company's chairman and chief executive officer, said unprecedented cost increases accounted for the higher price.

He said the increase, to take effect Sept. 30, represents approximately 3.5 per cent of the selling price to consumers.

Last week, Benson and Hedges Tobacco Company announced a price increase of 67 cents for 1,000 cigarettes, representing an increase for the retail customer of two-cents-a-pack.

Pork Paprika a money-saver—for a big family or guests.

By MARY MOORE

One reader wrote quite sharply commanding me to let her know what I'm up to. "Did you go to Europe this summer? Did you visit Peter and Marianne? I'm sure others would like to hear about your family besides me:" Her name is Ella.

Okay Ella. I spent my summer holidays with Marianne's family for two weeks north of Pembroke on the Ottawa River; and one week with Pete's family on Lake Joseph near Rosseau. In early October I go to Amsterdam in Holland to an A.I.J.P.F. (Association International Journalists) conference and in late October I go to Vancouver and Kamloops for the salmon spawning run.

I'm glad Ella asked for I enjoy cooking with Marianne and Margaret. We learn from one another. I was tremendously impressed with Margaret's Pork Paprika. She is a real expert at stretching. For their family of six children she bought a 3½-pound butt at 88c per pound and did as follows.

MARGARET'S PORK PAPRIKA
(serves 8)

2 or 3 tbsp. cooking oil
3½ lbs. pork butt
4 large cooking onions peeled and sliced
2 green peppers cut into 1" pieces one 6-oz. can tomato paste
2 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
2 tbsp. paprika
2½ c. water

Trim fat and bone from pork butt and cut meat into 1" cubes. (We had ½ pound fat and bones.) Brown the cubed pork in a large pot in the cooking oil or some of the trimmed off fat, until golden. Add the onions and all remaining ingredients and simmer, covered, 1¼ hours. This is a beautiful color. Serve on noodles or mashed potatoes or rice.

If rice is chosen, to serve eight you need 2 cups raw long grain rice to 4½ cups boiling water and 1½ teaspoons salt, brought to a hard boil, covered. Turn off heat for 5 minutes. Turn on simmer for 25 minutes. Lovely and fluffy.

Thanks to Margaret you have this great dish which could be served with aplomb for a guest dinner. Try it.

Today's dessert offering from this recipe giver is for those who have to move quickly. It is a cake — moist and spicy — that is made from start to finish in the beater bowl.

We are giving a variation but it is questionable: you can add 1 cup raisins but if you do they must be chopped. (If you do add raisins and do not chop them the crumb of the cake clings to them and spoils the appearance when cake is cut — but tastes great!)

MOIST SPICE CAKE
(10" tube or bundt pan)

1 c. butter or margarine (room temperature)
2 c. light brown sugar, packed
4 eggs
1 c. buttermilk or sour milk (see note below)
3 c. unsifted cake-and-pastry flour
1½ tsp. baking soda
1½ tsp. salt
1½ tsp. cinnamon
½ tsp. nutmeg
½ tsp. ground cloves
(1 c. chopped raisins — optional)

In beater bowl cream together butter or margarine and sugar until light and fluffy. Add eggs and beat on "high" until batter is thick and creamy. Raise beaters. Stir in by hand buttermilk or sour milk until blended. (NOTE: If you do not have buttermilk or sour milk add 2 tablespoons vinegar to a one-cup measure then fill with sweet milk to the one-cup mark. Stir and let stand 10 minutes.) Add flour, baking soda, salt, cinnamon, nutmeg and cloves, lower beaters and beat thoroughly until batter is thick and creamy, at least 10 minutes, scraping down sides of bowl 2 or 3 times. (Fold in raisins if used.) Pour batter into a well-buttered 10" tube or bundt pan. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 50-55 minutes until toothpick inserted in centre comes out clean. Remove to cake rack. Cool in pan 30 minutes then remove from pan and cool completely. Drizzle over butterscotch glaze: made by melting 2 tablespoons butter and 2 tablespoons brown sugar in saucepan. Remove from heat and stir in 1 cup icing sugar and 3 tablespoons hot water Stir until smooth and thin enough to drip from spoon over top and down sides of cake.

Sausage as Convenience Food Is Centuries-Old Tradition

THIRD SECTION
FOOD and nutrition

Sausage was probably one of the world's first 'convenience' foods and by no means a twentieth century innovation. Born of necessity centuries ago as a means of preserving meats, sausage was chopped or ground meat, seasoned, stuffed into a suitable package or casing and cooked, smoked or dried. By definition sausage is still the same thing, but today there are more than 200 kinds available.

Sausages are usually classified according to their method of processing. The main types are fresh, cooked, smoked—both cooked and uncooked, dry or semi-dry, and cooked meat specialties.

Fresh sausage is made from selected cuts of fresh meat and must be cooked thoroughly before serving. The most common variety is fresh pork but pork and beef or all beef are also available. Cooked sausage is ready-to-eat and includes such products as blood sausage and liverwurst. It may or may not be smoked after cooking. Smoking imparts a different color and flavor. Uncooked, smoked sausage is smoked only for a short time and it must be cooked before serving. A familiar example is country-style pork sausage. Cooked, smoked sausage, which has been smoked then cooked, is ready-to-serve as purchased. Examples of this type are wieners and bologna. Dry or semi-dry sausage is made from selected meat with a high salt and spice content. Some of the common ones are salami, summer sausage and pepperoni. Cooked meat specialties, or more commonly "cold cuts", are prepared meat products which are cooked or baked and ready to serve. Head cheese, tongue loaf and macaroni and cheese loaf are a few of the varieties in this class.

Recently amendments were made to the Food and Drug Regulations which permit the addition of such ingredients as pickles, olives, cheese and fruit to sausage and sausage meat as well as other meat products. According to these amendments any of the ingredients added must be in separate identifiable pieces in a sufficient enough quantity that they can be differentiated from the sausage or sausage meat. Also the label of sausage products to which any of the aforementioned have been added must say so and must carry a complete list of ingredients in descending order of their proportion or in terms of percentage composition.

Regulations also define the amount of cereal, moisture and fat that is allowed. Sausage or sausage products may contain up to 4 per cent binder or filler and up to 60 per cent moisture if a filler is used. If no filler is used the moisture content may not exceed 75 per cent. In comparison, uncooked, lean, round of beef contains about 66 per cent moisture. Regulations have been proposed to set a minimum quantity and quality for protein.

Secrets of Sourdough

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

We have a friend and neighbor whose zest for breadmaking is excelled only by his passion for anonymity. He is a man in his early 40's, conservationist and refugee from Wall Street, slender of body and lean of jaw although scarcely a month roll by that he doesn't produce half a hundred loaves in his home oven, a Garland range. The benefactors if his hobby are a few score friends for miles around.

We will call him Jean Biche. We call him that because in common French parlance it literally translates as John Doe.

Biche's breadmaking technique is no study in simplicity. And yet he is convinced that most of the rules laid down in books on breadmaking are a lot of inhibiting nonsense. He dissolves his yeast in water at tap temperature from lukewarm to cold; he lets his bread rise without much folderol where degrees are concerned (it must not be too hot is his only admonition); and he gives precise measurements a fairly wide berth.

He is given to such thoughts as "Excessive kneading won't spoil a good loaf," or, "Yeast breads are practically indestructible"; and "When you think of how many thousands of years people all over the world have been working with yeast doughs under the worst circumstances, it can't be difficult." Also, "If I can make bread, anybody can."

Biche looks with considerable disdain on commerical household granular yeast, preferring the fresh solid yeast once available in all grocery stores. He buys his solid yeast from a local breadmaker.

The gentlman has a well-tended sourdough started that has prospered in his kitchen for seven years, and he uses it in almost all his bread-making. He buys his staples for baking — flour, including buckwheat, whole wheat, groats and so on — by mail from Walnut Acres, Penns Creek, Pa. 17862.

We are convinced that much of the superiority of Biche's bread involves the technique of creating steam in the oven when the loaves are introduced.

For years steam has been used in professional ovens, and this results in the superior crust for which French breads are noted. To produce his steam, Biche uses two or three heavy iron splitting wedges found in his barn some years ago. We recently purchased three of them (six pounds each) at a our local hardware store.

The wedges are heated to fever pitch on top of the stove, and at the moment his loaves are introduced into the oven, he simultaneously tosses the red-hot iron into a pan of water resting on the bottom of the oven. This creates an intense and all-enveloping steam throughout the oven and the loaves come out as crisp as from any bakery in France or elsewhere.

We offer Jean Biche's basic recipe for a sourdough French bread that may be used for any conventional baking. We also offer his specialized technique in shaping and baking. To follow through with his technique it is necessary to be supplied with the following:

1. Two cardboard boxes that resemble the bottom of a long, narrow candy box fashioned from an ordinary sheet of cardboard and masking tape. How to make the boxes is described elsewhere.

2. Two small compact, heavy iron pieces weighing a total of about 10 to 12 pounds.

3. A metal pan containing water and large enough to hold the iron pieces.

4. A set of heavy duty asbestos gloves plus other insulating equipment for handling the iron pieces when they are heated.

JEAN BICHE'S SOURDOUGH BREAD

1. To shape the loaves for these breads, you will need two long improvised cardboard trays. They resemble the bottom of a long, narrow candy box. Each one is about 28 inches long, and the bottom and sides measure about 2 inches each. They are joined together lengthwise so that the open top measures about 4 inches across.

2. You will also need two small, compact and heavy iron pieces such as splitting wedges each weighing 4 to 6 pounds. These are heated and dropped into a basin of water inside the oven to create steam for the bread.

3. Prepare the basic recipe for sourdough French bread (see recipe), ending with Step 4. At that point the dough will have risen twice.

4. Punch the dough down a second time and, using lightly floured fingers, empty the dough onto a lightly floured board. Pat and turn the dough in the flour without kneading. Leave the outer surface or "skin" of the dough intact.

5. Using a knife or pastry scraper, cut the dough in half. Note that the dough's cut surface is moist, the outer skin pliable and dry.

6. Gather half the dough into lightly floured hands, holding the dough skin-side down in cupped palms. Work the dough around and around in the hands, stretching the skin gently, encouraging the edges to the cut suface together and shaping the batch into a ball. Seal the ends of the cut surface. Repeat with the second half of the dough.

7. When the first batch of dough is shaped, place it on a lightly floured surface, sealed side up and, using a rolling pin, roll the dough into an oval.

8. Fold the left third of the dough over toward the centre, then fold over the right side over that. Roll the dough out lightly.

9. Repeat the rolling and folding. Finally bring up the outer edges of the dough and seal with the hands.

10. Using the fingers and palms, roll the dough into a sausage-shape, approximately 18 or 20 inches long. Repeat with the second batch of dough.

11. Line the two cardboard forms with clean cloths and place the lengths of dough in them. Cover with more clean cloths and let stand in a moderately warm place until doubled in bulk.

12. As the dough rises, preheat the oven to 500 degrees.

13. Simultaneously, place the heavy metal pieces such as iron splitting wedges on an electric or gas burner until they become fiery hot.

14. Shortly before the dough is ready to be placed in the oven, bring about two quarts of water to the boil, using a tea kettle

ANOTHER BREADMAKING fan is Mrs. Lucille Eaton who carefully removes fresh raised dough from a warming oven she designed herself. She says the warming closet, powered by a 15-watt bulb, is her "top secret weapon." Professionals also use steam for super crusts.

15. Using extreme caution and wearing padded asbestos gloves (use pot holders, too, as an added precaution), transfer the hot iron pieces to a baking pan about three inches deep. Place the pan on the bottom of the oven. Transfer the oven rack to the top shelf.

16. Sprinkle a baking sheet lightly with about three tablespoons of corn meal.

17. Remove the top towel from the bread and gently but briskly turn the loaves — bottom-side up — onto the baking sheet. Using a sharp razor, quickly make three lengthwise, slightly diagonal and parallel gashes on top of each loaf of bread.

18. Place the baking sheet on the top rack of the oven and, using great care, pour the water from the tea kettle over the iron pieces in the pan. This will cause immediate steam, so shut the oven door as hurriedly as possible.

19. Bake the loaves for from 25 to 35 minutes. Oven temperatures from residence to residence vary greatly, however, so it is best to check the breads after the first 20 minutes to see that they are browning evenly, turn the baking sheet as the loaves bake.

20. When done, remove the breads to a rack and let cool. These loaves freeze well and may be reheated to advantage in a hot oven.

Yield Two loaves.

A Basic Recipe for Making Sourdough French Bread

1 one-quarter-ounce package dry yeast (see note)
3 cups plus ½ teaspoon unbleached flour and additional flour for kneading
½ teaspoon sugar
2 cups water, approximately lukewarm or at room temperature
1 tablespoon salt
¼ cup sourdough starter, see formula (optional)

1. Place the yeast in a small bowl and add the half teaspoon flour, the sugar and three tablespoons of water. Stir until yeast dissolves.

2. Place the three cups of flour into a mixing bowl and add the salt and sourdough starter. Add the yeast mixture and stir with the handle of a wooden spoon gradually, adding about half a cup of water. When a sticky mass starts to form, start kneading the dough with the hands, gradually adding about a quarter cup more water. As the dough is kneaded, scrape the inside of the bowl with the fingers so that all the four comes off the bowl and into the dough. The total amount of water used in this recipe should be slightly less than the one cup indicated. Knead the dough for a total of about 10 minutes and if the dough seems too sticky, incorporate a little more flour. Similarly, if it seems too dry, knead in a little more water. When ready, the dough should be firm but somewhat resilient and pliable. Gather the dough into a ball.

3. Place the dough in a bowl and cover with a damp cloth. Let stand until the dough is doubled in bulk. This may take from one and one-half to three hours, depending on the temperature. The dough should not rise too quickly. If the resting place is too warm, it may kill the yeast.

4. When the dough is doubled in bulk, pull it away neatly and cleanly from the sides of the bowl, using the fingers. Work it briefly until it is thoroughly collapsed. Gather the dough into a ball once more and return it to the bowl. Cover and let rise once more until doubled in bulk.

5. The dough is now ready to be shaped for baking. There are various conventional methods to shape the loaves. the simplest is to simply punch the dough down and shape it with lightly floured fingers and hands into two "French-style" loaves. The loaves are then placed on a baking sheet sprinkled with corn meal, covered with a cloth and left to rise until doubled in bulk. They are then slashed diagonally in two or three places and baked in a 400-to-500 degree oven 20 to 35 minutes. A basin of water is sometimes recommended to be placed in the oven for moisture as the loaves bake.

Yield: Two loaves.

Note Biche prefers to use an equal wieght of fresh yeast, which he buys privately from a local breadmaker.

TWO WAYS TO PRODUCE SOURDOUGH STARTER

Traditional Method

Place one cup of flour and one cup of water (both arbitrary amounts) in a bowl or pitcher and stir until the flour is well moistened and roughly blended. There is no need to stir until smooth.

Cover with a damp cloth or cover loosely with clear plastic and let stand in the open (purists state out of doors, although a cool kitchen does nicely), stirring gently once a day, from two days to a week.

After a certain period, depending on room conditions, including temperature, a natural fermentation should occur. A clear yellowish liquid may rise to the surface. This is normal. Stir before using.

Quick Method

1 one-quarter-ounce package dry yeast
2 cups lukewarm water
2 cups white flour, preferably unbleached.

1. Combine the yeast and water in a bowl and stir with a rubber spatula until blended. Add the flour and stir until the flour is well moistened and roughly blended. There is no need to stir until smooth.

2. Cover with a damp cloth or cover loosely with clear plastic and let stand at room temperature (not too hot) for a day or longer until the mixture starts to ferment. A clear yellowish liquid may rise to the surface. This is normal. Stir before using.

How To Maintain Starters

The natural bacteria in a sourdough starter "lives" on the flour in the mixture and must be "fed." As sourdough is used, replace the used portion with an equal quantity of flour and water. Even when the starter is not used, a certain amount of fresh flour and water must be added to keep it alive. A half cup each of water and flour, once a week, should suffice.

Kitchen Life More Shared But Cleanup Still No Fun

By HILDA BEASTALL

Quite as many men as women are preparing meals at home, some for themselves alone, others for families.

The day of the boarding house table as the only way a bachelor can get a home cooked meal ended many years ago. The bachelor suite complete with nifty kitchenette is an invitation to single persons to experiment.

All the great chefs were men so its nothing new to talk with men about food. And they are usually more inclined to want a satisfying meal all at one go, than to be nibbling again in an hour or two.

Women or men, all agree the cleaning up part of food preparation is an anti climax. This attitude is causing us to forgo a well balanced meal when more than one or two utensils will be needed. It is probably the reason so many bachelors turn to prepared foods.

My remedy is to plan the sequence of preparation so that a minimum of bowls and pans are used.

When definitely finished with them, set them under the warm water tap to fill up and soak while finishing the job. It then takes only a few minutes to wash, dry and put them away.

An egg beater is no problem to clean if dropped into cold water. With an electric beater just drop the beaters in.

Utensils for greasy foods need hot water and a dish-washing soap; starchy and sweet foods — flour, cereals, potato, and most vegetables and fruits are removable easily when put at once into cool to warm water.

Having two measuring cups is a time saver. Keep one in the flour sifter for dry ingredients; use the other for liquid measures. I don't wash the flour measuring cup at every using.

A set of measuring spoons kept always in one place is necessary when first reducing a large recipe to a single serving, and also for increasing a two serving recipe to a family size.

When preparing a familiar meal, we all guess or gauge amounts by sight.

Time can be saved when you know how to skin tomatoes and peaches quickly and without a great mess. Put the fruit into a bowl or pan, cover with scalding water for just 30 seconds. Cover with cold water for about one minute. Make a cut at the top (stem end) of the fruit with a sharp knife, and lift the edge of the skin, peeling it downwards. The skin comes away freely without tearing the fruit flesh.

Here is a quick cookie recipe for the busy man, using a minimum of pans and equipment. Two different kinds can be made with the one batch. Use one half for cookies as directed; put the other half into 12 small (two-inch) muffin pans. The latter will be a different texture to the flatter cookies. Both are good fare to serve with coffee to casual guests or to take for a packed lunch.

WHEAT GERM COOKIES

4 Tbsp. soft margarine
1 Tbsp demerara sugar
1 small egg
½ cup wholewheat flour
½ tsp baking powder
¼ tsp salt
¼ cup powdered skim milk
¼ cup water (or less)
1 cup rolled oats
1 cup
½ cup wheat germ
½ cup raisins.

Into mixing bowl, measure margarine and sugar. Mix well with wooden spoon; break in the egg and beat with spoon until light and creamy (about two min-utes).

Into the flour sifter measure the flour, baking powder, salt and powdered skim milk. Add to creamed mixture alternately with only enough water to make a very stiff dough.

Stir in rolled oats, wheat germ and raisins.

Still using the mixing spoon, place by teaspoon amounts on a greased cookie sheet, shaping the dough a little with a knife tip. Press down lightly with fork tines. You get a crisper cookie.

About the same amount goes into each small muffin pan. Clean out the bowl well to avoid waste of good ingredients, then put bowl under cold water to prevent sticking.

Bake both pans in a 350-deg. oven for about 20 minutes, until lightly brown. Do not scorch or raisins lose their flavor.

Remove from pans and cool either on a wire rack or turn each cookie upside down on large plate to crisp underside as it cools.

Store in a tin, lined with waxed paper. Remember wheat germ and wholewheat flour baked goods do not keep long at room temperature but can be frozen in small sealed plastic bags in a top-of-refrigerator freezer for three or four months. Store a few in a bag on refrigerator shelf for daily use.

A one-pan supper, either to serve one or a family of four, is possible by preparing one step of the meal ahead of time. To serve four:

MACARONI WITH TOMATO-BACON SAUCE

6 slices bacon cut in ½-inch pieces
¼ cup finely sliced sweet onion
3 medium tomatoes
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. finely chopped parsley
½ cup cooked green beans
OR
½ cup cooked green peas
OR
½ cup cooked spinach
2 cups cooked macaroni

In a frypan having a cover, cook bacon pieces and onion. Add diced tomatoes, salt, parsley and green vegetable. Simmer gently with lid on for 15 to 20 minutes until mixture thickens. Stir occasionally to prevent sticking.

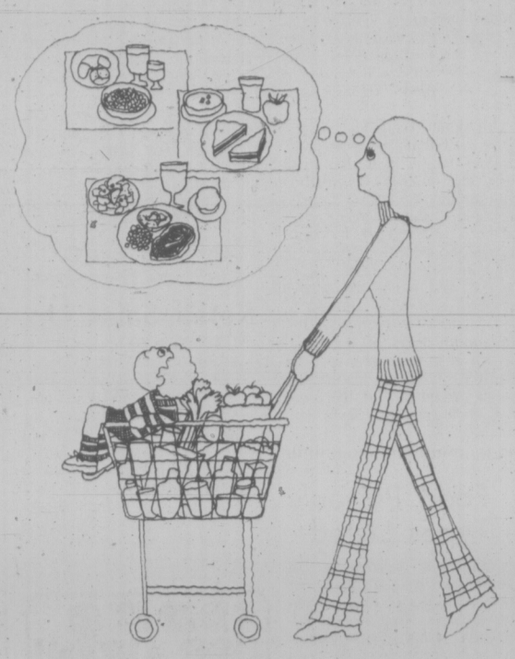
Either have macaroni previously cooked or prepare it while other mixture is simmering. Two cups of macaroni in one quart of boiling water with one teaspoon of salt; boil rapidly for 10 minutes.

Drain away remaining liquid. Serve hot with the sauce.

All three kinds of vegetables can be used to increase quantity if wanted. For one serving cut down accordingly. The same amount of macaroni cooked will be useful for two days as a foundation for a salad, to add to homemade soup, or to go into a casserole with hamburger, onion and tomato to serve with steamed cabbage.

Men are good at preparing this type of meal. It has flavor, appearance and quantity enough to be satisfying.

A wholewheat bread toasted cheese sandwich and coffee is a good windup if needed.



NO MATTER who prepares the meals the job doesn't start there. With shopping you can never take enough time or care to plan balanced nutritional and economical meals for yourself or family. Chances are youngster riding in shopping cart will himself take active part in food purchases in future.

YOUR TURN TO COOK: A GARDENER'S SOUP

By KRISTINA STEVENS

(Today's reader recipe is from Kristina L. Stevens of 5050 Sooke Road. If you have a family or favorite recipe you would like to share, send it to Your Turn to Cook, c/o The Times, 2621 Douglas.)

I enjoy reading your food columns in the Times very much, with their emphasis on nutrition as well as taste. Last night I tried a recipe for soup that I think might be interesting to you, as all the ingredients come straight from the garden. Our garden is nothing special, and I imagine there are lots of people who could duplicate this soup. According to the recipe, the flavor depends completely on having fresh and young vegetables. It was so tasty that my husband and I made a complete meal of it, with a couple of slices of homemade bread, although we are by no means vegetarians.

VEGETABLE SOUP

4 to 6 small new potatoes, halved
2 cups water
2 teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon white pepper
4 tiny new onions, or 4 green onions cut in 3" lengths
2 tablespoons butter
16 very young (3-inch) fresh baby carrots
2 cups fresh young snap beans
2 cups fresh shelled tiny new peas
2 cups half-and-half
3 tablespoons flour

Cook the potatoes in simmering water for about 5 minutes (they should not be tender); add the salt, pepper, butter, onions, carrots, and green beans and simmer 8 minutes more. Add the tiny green peas and cook another 2 minutes, or until the vegetables are tender crisp.

Mix together the cream and flour until smooth. Stir into the simmering vegetables, and cook about 5 minutes, stirring until soup is thickened.

I used plain milk instead of half-and-half, black pepper, and somewhat larger carrots, as that is what we happen to have. Hope you enjoy it!

COOL, FRESH, crisp salad greens and vegetables combined with cheese, eggs, meat and poultry results in this hearty "Chef's Salad" and great eating. All salad ingredients should be cold, crisp and dry before using them.

Sun Stretches Salad Season

With the increasing emphasis on nutrition and weight watching, it is always nice to know when something which is good to eat is also good for us. Salads are one of these nice foods and it's easy to be enthusiastic about them when there are so many fresh salad greens to choose from during this so called "endless summer."

All salad greens and vegetables contribute necessary nutrients to our diet and most are low in calories. Salads containing cabbage, lettuce, spinach, green onions, radishes, cucumbers, celery, green pepper or tomatoes will contribute vitamin C. Leafy greens and yellow or orange vegetables provide vitamin A.

Of course to obtain the maximum level of these nutrients it is important to start fresh by choosing top quality salad ingredients at the store and then treating them with care once at home. It is wise to purchase amounts that can be used in a few days.

Good care adds to the life and flavor of greens. Wash them to remove any grit, then drain and chill in a tightly closed plastic bag. Most salad vegetables should be washed before storing in a plastic bag. Mushrooms, peas and carrots may be stored unwashed. All salad ingredients should be cold, crisp and dry before using them. For more information on how to buy and store salad ingredients write to Information Division, Agriculture Canada for a free copy of "Salad Mates."

Protein foods such as meat, poultry, eggs and cheese combined with salad greens and vegetables can turn an appetizing side salad into a hearty main course salad. Try the "Chefs Salad" this summer, suggested by Agriculture Canada.

CHEF'S SALAD

2 thick slices (about 7 ounces) cooked chicken, cut in strips; 2 thick slices (about 7 ounces) cooked ham, cut in strips; 2 ounces Canadian Swiss-style cheese, cut in strips; 2 medium tomatoes, cut in wedges; 2 sliced hard-cooked eggs; 6 cups torn lettuce; ½ cup sliced cucumber; ½ cup sliced green onions; ½ cup sliced radishes; one-third cup diced green pepper; ½ teaspoon salt; ⅛ teaspoon pepper; ¼ cup French dressing.

Combine all ingredients except dressing and toss gently. Chill. Just before serving add dressing. 6 servings.

Retail Sales Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Sales by retail stores in July rose by 1.7 per cent to a seasonally adjusted total of $3.746 billion, Statistics Canada reports.

There were gains in 13 of the 18 trade groups. The largest were 9.2 per cent in men's clothing stores and 5.8 per cent in family clothing stores. The largest declines were 4.3 per cent for fuel dealers and 3.9 per cent for variety stores.

Food Poison Types Listed

Consumers' Association of Canada warns that the most common types of food poisoning such as streptococci, salmonella and staphylococci thrive in perishable foods with high moisture content — milk, meats, poultry, sea foods, sauces, salad dressings, eggs and gravies.

Any food should be promptly refrigerated after cooking as bacteria grow in temperatures of 45-120 degrees F.

Common food poisoning is followed by stomach cramps or slight nausea. Apply heat to the abdomen and drink hot fluids. Don't use laxatives, salts or castor oil.

Cook Without Onions? Tastebuds Would Cry

Try to imagine how flavorless cooking would be without onions. They complement the flavor of soups, stews and casseroles, perk up salads, sandwiches and relishes and are delicious as a vegetable.

Soon this year, white, yellow and red-skinned onions are available on the market. The yellow, cooking variety is probably the most popular. When buying onions, look for ones which are well-shaped, firm and dry with shiny, crackly skin and no evidence of sprouting. There are about 5 medium onions in a pound. The grade Canada No. 1 and the size range will usually be marked on the package.

Onions will keep well uncovered in a dry, airy place for two to four weeks but, if good storage is not available, buy amounts that can be used up in a short time.

All good cooks use onions for seasoning and as accompaniments. Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada, offer two unique suggestions for serving them as a vegetable.

BOILED ONIONS WITH SPANISH SAUCE

1½ pounds cooking onions (8 to 10 medium)
Boiling water to cover
¾ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons chopped celery
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
1 tablespoon flour
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
¼ teaspoon oregano
1½ cups canned tomatoes

Remove root and stem end and outer skin. Wash. Leave small onions whole, cut larger ones in half. Add enough boiling water to cover onions in saucepan. Sprinkle with salt. Cover, return to boil, then reduce heat and boil gently until just tender (about 20 minutes). Drain. To make sauce saute celery and green pepper in butter. Blend in flour and seasonings. Add tomatoes. Stir and cook until thick. Makes 1 ½ cups sauce. Pour over onions. 6 servings.

HONEYED ONIONS

12 small onions (about 1½ pounds)
1 chicken bouillon cube
½ cup boiling water
½ cup honey
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 tablespoons butter
Parsley

Peel onions and place in greased baking dish. Dissolve bouillon cube in boiling water. Combine next 5 ingredients and pour over onions. Dot with butter. Cover and bake at 350 degrees F until tender (about 1 hour). Uncover to brown for last 15 minutes. Garnish with parsley. 6 servings.

No fuss, no muss baby-feeding
Introducing baby to solid food can be a trying, messy business. Often baby doesn't want it — and lets you know loudly and clearly. An easy, pleasant and agreeable way is to add a piece of a Farley's Baby Feeding Biscuit to baby's bottle at the time of day you have picked for baby's main mealtime. The piece of Farley's will dissolve instantly, thus may be fed through the bottle's nipple without fuss or muss. Baby will love it — baby's appreciation will be that obvious! As baby gets a little older, add a little more Farley's. Farley's Baby Feeding Biscuits are good for growing babies, for Farley's have added Riboflavin, Niacin, Iron and Calcium. Ask for Farley's Baby Feeding Biscuits at your favourite food store.

DEEPFREEZE QUERIES ANSWERED

Have you been wondering whether or not you are making efficient use of your freezer? If so, you may be asking questions similar to the following frequently asked.

How much should you store in a freezer?

Home freezers vary in capacity from about 7 cubic feet to 26 cubic feet. They will hold 33 to 35 pounds of food per cubic foot of storage space. For maximum economy, buy a size which will hold only the amount of food you want to store for family use. Remember that it costs the same to keep a freezer one-quarter full as it does to operate one which is completely full. Once you have the freezer, keep it full — not by stockpiling, but by using up and replacing food as quickly as possible.

How much food can you freeze at one time?

Freeze no more than 4 pounds of food per cubic foot of freezer space in any 24-hour period. For example, a maximum of 48 pounds could be frozen in a 12 cubic foot freezer in one day. In order to obtain a high quality frozen product, the food must be lowered to zero degrees F. within 24 hours. If too much food is put in at one time, the freezer will not lower the temperature rapidly enough.

Foods can be frozen most quickly if they are placed in a single layer against the sides of the freezing compartment. If you have an upright freezer with freezing coils in the shelves, place food in a single layer on the shelves.

At what temperature should foods be frozen?

A freezer should maintain zero degrees F. or lower, with as little temperature variation as possible. This is very important since the storage times for frozen products are appreciably shortened if the freezing temperature is ven slightly above this level. Always keep a thermomter in your freezer to check the temperature. If zero degrees F. is not maintained, food will have to be used up more quickly. Recommended storage times are based on zero degrees F.

Is it economical to freeze fresh fruits and vegetables?

This depends on the price you have to pay for the produce. Home-grown fruits and vegetables, of course, are most economical to freeze. When it is necessary to purchase the fresh produce, calculate the number of servings you could expect to obtain from a pound of the product, and compare the per serving for the fresh and frozen products. Remember too, that the cost of packaging and electricity required to operate the freezer must be considered in the cost of the home-grown product.

It is not generally considered economical to freeze apples and vegetables such as cabbage, carrots, onions, potatoes, rutabaga and winter squash, since these can be held satisfactorily for periods of 3 to 6 months if you have cold storage.

Is it economical to freeze a hindquarter of beef?

The cost of a hindquarter, and the cost of individual cuts, varies among stores and regions. When buying a side or hindquarter, remember that you are not purchasing all meat. On a Canada A1 or B1 animal about 72 per cent of the hindquarter is saleable meat. The remainder is lost in fat, bones, and shrinkage.

These losses must be considered in the price paid. For example if the retail price is $1.10 per pound for the hindquarter the actual price of the meat would be $1.53 per pound. This might be a good buy considering that 75 per cent of the saleable meat is composed of tender roasts and steaks, and round steaks. However, at higher prices you might be best to look for advertised specials at your local meat counters, and buy extra meat when these are offered.

Zucchinni Expert To Visit Victoria

According to bookstores in Seattle, sex is taking second place to zucchinni.

The sequel to Joy of Sex, More Joy, while selling very well, is running second to Paula Simmons' The Zucchinni Cookbook.

In two months the first printing of 10,000 has sold out and a second printing of 10,000 is now ready for zucchinni lovers and those who would like to be. (The world is divided in two—those who love zucchinni and those who don't.)

A longtime interest in vegetable gardening and in creating and swapping recipes with other home gardeners led Paula Simmons to write this 128 page book containing more than 100 recipes. Paula and her husband are farmers near Suquamish, Washington in Puget Sound.

If you would like to know how to use zucchinni in breads, cookies, cakes; in salads, soups and dips; in pies, pickles and . . . well just about in any food preparation, then come visit Paula this Saturday, September 28.

She will be in the Hillside Mall by the Julian Bookstore from 10:30 to 12:30 in the morning; and on Woodward's food floor near the mall entrance from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Paula writes her recipes backwards. Unlike conventional cookbooks, her book lists the ingredient ("french dressing") before the amount ("three tablespoons"), so the cook can tell at a glance if she or he has supplies on hand.

As an added bonus, Paula's book boasts a lively introduction by Louis R. Guzzo, executive editor of The Seattle P.I., who identifies himself as having "55 years' experience in eating."

Guzzo reveals how the citizens of Abruzzi, Italy, were first given zucchinni seeds by Zarathursta and warned never to give the heavenly food to the greedy, the licentious or the non-Italian.

"No matter how you spell it, chop it, fry it, broil it, saute it, swallow it, it still comes out Italian soul food," he says.

Ms. Simmons (or, as Guzzo insists on calling her, "Paoline Zaglione") points out that zucchinni is a dieter's delight, since it has only 74 calories per pound. Even spinach has 109, but, of course, the author can't be held responsible for those who indulge in zucchinni pancakes, zucchalmond squares or meringue zucchinni pie.

In these days of the Great Inflation, zucchinni may yet save mankind. With a copy of Paula's book, a package of zucchinni seeds and a small shovel, you can't go wrong. But, as Guzzo says, "when you plant those seeds, for goodness' sake, jump back quickly."

No-Sugar Pop Costs Same

WASHINGTON (WP) — The small percentage of people who buy diet soft drinks are subsidizing the rest of the soft drink imbibers.

The cost of these beverages, which do not contain sugar, an ingredient that has gone up in price almost 300 per cent in the last year, has kept pace with soft drinks sweetened with sugar.

This is the result of an industry-wide practice, according to Thomas F. Baker, president of the U.S. National Soft Drink Association, of maintaining "an equal level of pricing," or "an averaging of costs" on sugarless as well as sugared drinks.

Prices of all soft drinks have risen 20 to 30 per cent in the last 12 months. While the industry attributes the skyrocketing prices of sug... to increases.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis is on how to get your wishes to become realities. Friends and desires mingle and you have more fun than usual; there is less pressure and details are left for another time. Social life accelerates and you smile instead of frown.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You get what you want but it may not be good for you. Don't ask for more than you can handle — refuse to promise more than you can deliver at reasonable time. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpio persons figure prominently. Yes, here is more recognition, perhaps a promotion. But do you need it?

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): What appears out of reach may be closer than is apparent. Open lines of communication. Speak, take notes, write, get ideas on the record. Another Gemini — and a Virgo — could be in picture. A long-awaited message is received.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Get together with close family member and talk about money. Get budget requirements straight. Agree on costs, purchases — especially luxury items. Love is in the picture and emotions tend to make you impulsive, extravagant.

LTO (July 23-Aug. 22): Emphasis is on agreements, contracts, partnerships — and marriage. Improve public relations. Clear up misconceptions. One you care for is under impression that you shattered a promise. Reveal the record and be sure your side of story is told and understood.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Practical matters dominate. You may be in position to increase earning power. Know it; act in confident manner. Older individual wants you as protege. Be gracious — and accept without abandoning principles or your own style.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with change, dealings with children, romance and creative endeavours. You get rid of burden — you let go of past and prepare to take cold plunge into future. Prospects are brighter than you might imagine.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Roadblock is removed. You get going — prices are set and you regain sense of direction. Emphasis is on home, property, end of matters. Leo, Aquarius could play prominent roles. You will feel more secure.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Short journey may be necessary. Relatives are likely to be involved. Call or message changes rhythm. Your plans are altered. Be flexible. Steer clear of senseless dispute based on who owes who and who owns what — make intelligent compromise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Accent is on payments, collections and ability to protect valuables. Some persons want to be free-and-easy at your expense. Know it and analyze flattery. Be grateful for the genuine — reject the superficial.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar cycle is such that you make right judgment at right time. You find ways to get through tangle of obstacles. Your specific needs are met — you make favorable impression and you are rewarded for efforts. Know it and be confident!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Highlight change, dialogue with one who is associated with institution, organization or hospital. You will receive benefit of any doubt. Gemini, Virgo persons could be in picture. Express ideas in positive manner.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you know how to make money but you are not always skillful when it comes to keeping it. You are an organizer, a person of powerful emotions. You soon will be traveling and will have much to do with Gemini, Sagittarius persons. Throughout your life, however, those born under Capricorn, Cancer will be drawn to you.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter Susie is marrying a man from out of town.

We want Susie to be married in our church with her friends and family present. This fellow she's marrying wants to be married in his church where there will be only strangers to Susie.

The reason he wants the wedding in his town is because his mother is old, sick and can't travel. She's a widow, and he's her only child. I think it's nice of him to be so considerate of his mother, but is it fair to us? Susie is ready to give in, and I don't think she should.

I planned on having the whole wedding taped and taking lots of pictures to send to his mother which would be almost like being at the wedding.

I want your opinion, Susie's Mom.

DEAR MOM: Although weddings traditionally take place in the bride's church, the groom's reasons for wanting to have it in his town seem reasonable to me. Why not let the bride and groom work it out?

And Mom, I sense an element of hostility here that goes deeper than the question of where to have the wedding.

DEAR ABBY: How do you tell a 36-year-old daughter to please sit up straight? Or do you think it's too late? Her posture makes me sick. She was always tall for her age and was so self-conscious about it she would go around stoop-shouldered. she looked like a hunchback.

I took her to an orthopedic doctor when she was 13 just to make sure she didn't have some kind of spinal deformity. He took X-rays and said she was perfect.

It still bothers me to see such a beautiful girl slouch all the time when she could look so nice. Any advice!—Texas Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: Apparently your daughter tuned you out years ago. But if you ever succeed in getting a 36-year-old woman to listen to her mother, please let me know your secret. A few million readers would appreciate it.

Nun Denies Defection Try

Mother Cecilia Mary Dodd denied in Supreme Court Tuesday that steps were taken in 1965 to lead her followers away from the Roman Catholic Church and into a breakaway church led from Toronto.

Her evidence came in the third week of a trial in which she and four other nuns are suing for control of the Society of the Love of Jesus, which has assets estimated at $1.5 million, and action opposed by the Roman Catholic Church.

In cross-examination of Mother Cecilia — founder of the society — defence counsel Cecil Branson referred to a church order requiring the sisters who were operating Good Shepherd Animal Shelter to return to St. Mary's Priory, the religious community where they had done recognized work of the church.

The sisters refused to obey the order, a development given wide publicity at the time, and which Branson supported by introducing voluminous newspaper clippings.

One of the stories referred to a move by Mother Cecilia and six other nuns at the animal shelter to join the Old Roman Catholic Church. When Branson asked if she had indicated these facts to the writer of the story or to any other person in the news business, Mother Cecilia replied: "I don't think so."

Branson referred to a letter from Mother Cecilia to Nelson D. Hillyer, of Toronto, bishop of the Old Roman Catholic Church, dated Sept. 2, 1965 and written on Good Shepherd letterhead.

When counsel for the plaintiffs Hugh McMillan objected on grounds he had not had a chance to see the letter, Branson admitted it was a "surprise document" intended to take the witness off-guard. Mr. Justice H. C. McKay allowed Branson to proceed.

Branson said the letter was in reply to one from Hillyer, and it was followed by another letter to Hillyer Sept. 13, 1965.

Mother Cecilia said, "It all turned out to be a rather fraudulent thing." She added there was no Old Roman Catholic Church in Canada, although it was known in the eastern U.S.

Branson said in her examination for discovery before the trial Mother Cecilia had said there was no such correspondence with the Old Roman Catholic Church. She said in court she had not bothered to answer mail from the old church.

At this point McKay interrupted and drew her attention to one of the letters in which it was shown Mother Cecilia sent Hillyer $250 to bring him to Victoria.

"I wanted to find out about it (the church)," Mother Cecilia replied.

Branson suggested she had asked in the letters what one must do "to become a member of the Old Roman Catholic Church. There are six sisters here and I believe they would do as I would do," he quoted.

He said Bishop Hillyer came out and met the sisters and he was asked again what they must do to join his church.

Defence counsel then described how they all went to chapel and knelt before Hillyer to pledge an oath of obedience to the bishop and his successors, to which each said in turn, "I promise."

Mother Cecilia said the act was in the form of a blessing.

McKay interjected:

"Did you take such a vow?"

"It was just a blessing," she replied.

"I gather she is saying there was no such vow by her or any of the sisters."

Mother Cecilia said she did not recall what blessing was said, and then referred to the newspaper account of the time as being "all false. That's when I found out it was all such a fraud."

Court was told the development referred to came after apostolic missions to Victoria by Father Andrew Keber, acting on instruction of the apostolic delegate to Canada, which in turn resulted from letters to Pope Paul VI from Mother Cecilia.

Keber made the point, according to reports quoted by Branson, that the animal shelter was not in keeping with the religious life and the nuns were asked to abandon it. There were more important duties "for a dedicated soul," Keber had suggested.

He wrote in his report Mother Cecilia's response to this was, "I will never give up this work. I will give up my faith before I give up this work"

In court, Mother Cecilia replied:

"I never said I would give up my faith. I would never give up my faith."

Keber reiterated in his report: "The community has more important apostolic work and the keeping of animals is not within its constitutions."

He added that when a religious takes vows of obedience, they are valid "to death."

Mother Cecilia, he wrote, had taken a firm stand and had "an obsession for animal welfare" which the church had disregarded.

Her chief difficulty, he said, was a "lack of obedience to authority," a feeling that "charity is more important than obedience." It was his impression, Keber wrote, that Mother Cecilia would conform to the laws of authority if she could do her own will.

Mother Cecilia told the court her discussion with Keber had gone "along those lines."

Branson said she had complained, among other things, of the loss of the blessed sacrament since leaving St. Mary's Priory. He said Keber reported her as saying, "I would rather forego the blessed sacrament" if it were a matter of choosing between that and her dogs.

"I don't think it could have been the blessed sacrament . . . that too precious," Mother Cecilia responded.

E & N MUST STAY—CITY

Victoria will again oppose an application by Canadian Pacific to close down the passenger service between Victoria and Courtenay provided by the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway Company.

The objection was recommended to city council Tuesday by its transportation planning committee.

"We should emphasize that in our honest and wholesome opinion there is no justification to discontinue the passenger service," said Mayor Peter Pollen.

In its application to the Canadian Transport Commission to discontinue the service, CP claims "there are no feasible operating practices, equipment assignment, scheduling, pricing or other aspects of operating this service that could conceivably render the service profitable."

When the company last applied to the CTC for permission to abandon the service, in 1969, the city registered strong objections. The federal agency rejected the application and instructed CP to improve the service.

Aboriginal Claim Backs Fish Plea

KELOWNA (CP) — Some Indian leaders in the Okanagan say they will stick to the aboriginal rights claim as government officials prepare to meet with them to discuss fishing regulations.

Chief Norman Lindley of the 180-member Westbank Indian Band said Tuesday he is against a permit scheme which the government proposes.

"Why do we need permits?" he asked. "We have aboriginal rights and we're using them."

A spokesman for the regional fish and wildlife branch said Monday his group expects to meet soon with Indian representatives in hope of establishing a "permit scheme to allow Indians to fish off reserves under government guidelines."

He would not elaborate on the proposal.

RCMP questioned a small group of Indians who were netting spawning Kokanee in Mission Creek Sunday. An RCMP spokesman said Monday the police were just watching until the aboriginal rights issue is settled.

Rathie Quits NHB

VANCOUVER (CP) — W. G. Rathie, controversial Pacific region member of the National Harbors Board, has resigned effective Oct. 4 after three years on the board, board chairman D. E. Taylor said Tuesday.

During his term, Rathie was criticized frequently for his methods of conducting NHB business. Members of the Vancouver Port authority, an advisory body, often charged that Rathie was dictatorial in his methods.

Taylor said Tuesday those conflicts had been resolved.

Rathie, 60, a former Vancouver mayor, said that when he was appointed in 1971, he then intended to accept only a three-year term, rather than the normal 10-year tenure.

He said he was asked by former fisheries minister Jack Davis to take the position with the express purpose of creating a modern port structure.

DRIVER FOLLOWED ORDERS, GOT FIRED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bus driver Joe Dhillon, 22, was fired Tuesday because four youngsters were lost during a weekend school outing.

Bus company and school officials spent the day making charges and counter-charges about the incident.

Nash Woo, 14, Grace Park, 16, Lynn Thiessen, 16, and Jackie Nishimura, 14, all of Vancouver, were found Monday after spending 30 hours on Black Mountain in the Horseshoe Bay area.

The four had been on a school outing Sunday with 28 other students and six teachers.

School officials said Dhillon left before a head count could be made, but the bus company said the driver obeyed orders to leave from a teachers.

Leonard Greer, president of the bus company, said he had to fire Dhillon because "the school called me up and told me what a crummy driver he was."

"We're in the school bus business and I didn't know what else to do but let him go," said Greer.

R. B. Brett, school principal who was not on the outing, said the dispatcher apparently told Dhillon to pick the students up at 5 p.m., when it should have been 5:30 p.m.

Dhillon said that he arrived at 5 p.m. to find three students waiting, then more began to arrive. He said that at 5:35 p.m. a teacher told him: "They're all here, let's go."

Al Cazes, a teacher on the trip, said some of the students "came down the mountain earlier and went home in cars with other teachers."

"We didn't know if the missing ones were lost or had gone home," he said.

Curtis Lists NDP Failings

The New Democratic Party government should be defeated but not replaced by the blacktop politics demonstrated by Social Credit during its 20-year reign in B.C., Saanich Conservative MLA Hugh Curtis said today.

He told a Victoria Chamber of Commerce luncheon at The Empress:

"We must guard against an over-reaction — where incompetence is replaced by insensitivity."

He said Social Credit in government put far too much emphasis on blacktop and hydro-electric projects and too little on improving conditions for people.

"We must recognize that fundamental fact of political life today — we cannot go on as we are and we cannot turn back.

"The non-socialist political party which accepts this most basic statement and embraces it, enthusiastically and sincerely, will not only win the next election, it will deserve to win."

He said it was easy to be critical of the NDP government but, in one respect, it was an improvement over Social Credit because it became concerned with the needs of people.

"I agree with the basic concept of change; catching up with many of the programs and people-oriented policies which were neglected, particularly in the latter years of the former government.

"This is almost 1975, not 1952. The problems have changed and the old solutions, which worked reasonably well then, are totally inadequate today," Curtis said.

"Regardless of how you and I feel about it, individuals now expect more from their government. They are concerned about land use, population densities, unrestricted growth, the environment, quality of education, better health care — particularly for the elderly — responsible development of our natural resources and protection of the beauty for which B.C. has become famous."

The warning by Curtis against a return to old Social Credit policies following a ringing attack on the NDP government, which he summed up as:

"Blunders and general incompetence."

His attack on the Barret government included criticism of the Insurance Corporation of B.C. and arbitrary actions by the government freezing land in the Inner Harbor area. He said the action was gross interference with Victoria city council.

Tree Plan To Cost Builders

If a proposal submitted by municipal development engineer J. R. Walker Tuesday is approved, developers in Saanich will have to pay for trees felled when new subdivisions are created.

The price could go as high as $4,520 for a large arbutus tree and $785 for a common alder tree.

Money raised by this method would be placed in a tree planting fund.

Walker's proposal, submitted at a public works committee meeting, will be studied at a joint meeting of the council and representatives of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada, a contractors' organization.

At Tuesday's meeting, Ald. Bill Campbell, a contractor, had doubts that Walker's plan would work.

Walker said he had made the proposal because "of the concern of council, staff, press and public" over the number of shade and ornamental trees being destroyed.

He suggested the levy for destroying trees could be made a condition of subdivision, condominium, strata title or similar developments.

Justice Study Demanded

VERNON (CP) — Deputy attorney-general Dave Vickers has called for a new attitude towards punishment of criminals and re-examination of the justice system.

Vickers, who is also chairman of the Justice Development Commission, set up last spring to re-organize the province's justice department, said not only do laws need re-examination but our entire attitude to punishment.

"We need to look at the criminal code and ask whether it is designed for people or property," he said. "If it is designed for people then why are the penalties so heavy when there is an abuse of property.

He was keynote speaker at a three-day Community Corrections Conference which opened here with some 350 probation officers, judges and penal reformers in attendance.

He suggested it was time to examine whether the criminal justice system is designed for drug users, alcoholics, prostitutes and maybe gamblers."

When he joined the attorney-general's department last fall, he found programs were "poor, inadequate or did not exist at all," and facilites were "overcrowded" and "inadequate from laundromat to court house," Vickers said.

There was concern that people are unable to do what they see as their traditional task, he added.

Police are understaffed, he said, the courts are plugged and corrections officers complain about continual remands.

Referring to the present "fragmented" system, Vickers said no one has bothered to train the police, the sheriffs, the courts or even the court reporters.

"We cannot rely any longer on someone in Victoria saying this is how its going to be, without any input."

He welcomed formation of the JDC, which he referred to "as a vehicle to help us plan, research and implement pilot programs."

Vickers said he could not afford to let the police sit by themselves and plan by themselves in a vacuum" nor afford to let it happen in the courts or corrections service.

"True, we need some more or different laws," he said. "But what we really need at this stage is a re-examination of the system itself. We have to search our hearts and ask ourselves was it really designed for this'."

TOUGH ACTION URGED

WASHINGTON (WP) — President Ford advocated "swift and prolonged imprisonment" for criminals in a speech here Tuesday in which he announced a new program to keep track of professional criminals.

"We must take the criminal out of circulation," the president said at the convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

"We must make crime hazardous and costly," he said. "We must ensure that swift ad prolonged imprisonment will inevitably follow each and every offence. Only then will we deter others from pursuing careers of crime."

Ford also praised the valor of Gail Cogg, the 24-year-old District of Columbia policewoman killed here last week while attempting to arrest a holdup suspect. Her funeral was taking place at the time the President spoke, and he asked those present to observe a moment of silence in her memory.

In his speech Ford said the career criminal impact program he is inaugurating on a national scale will be similar to the District of Columbia program to keep records on criminal repeaters.

The police plan, called the Major Violator Recidivist Unit, keeps records of persons arrested who are on a release from an earlier charge or conviction.

Sharks Gobble $750M

MONTREAL (CP) — Shylocking operations in the past 12 months brought the Montreal underworld an estimated $750 million profit on a capital investment of $35 million, Montreal Urban Community police told the Quebec Police Commission inquiry into organized crime Tuesday.

Det-Capt. Henri Marchessault testified "the little people, the average wage earner the unemployed," were the main victims of loan sharks who went out of their way to lend their "clients" $100 in return for $125 in a maximum of five weeks.

He said "the victims are for the most part, honest citizens, who, finding themselves in dire financial needs — and with a poor credit rating — turn to shylocks to get quick, easy loans on a no-questions asked basis." While the terms appear easy, the borrower can hardly ever get out of debt to the shylocks, he pointed out.

"Men are made to turn to crimes ranging from thefts from parked autos to armed robbery, while women are made to turn to crimes ranging from shoplifting to prostitution in order to increase their income."

He told inquiry chairman Judge Rhean Brunet shylocks are easily found.

Det-Capt. Marchessault said for the most part, either tavern waiters, barmen or taxi drivers receive a commission from the shylocks for each customer they line up.

There are also shylock agents in most firms which have 200 or more employees, he added.

"We know now it's one of the underworld's main sources of income," the policeman said.

The inquiry resumed Tuesday after having been adjourned July 28.

U.S. to End Anti-Dump Pulp Rule

WASHINGTON (CP) — A senior official of the U.S. treasury department said Tuesday that anti-dumping findings, in effect against Canadian kraft pulp imports for nearly two years, will be revoked—probably as early as next week.

The official, who asked not to be identified, made the statement following a Tariff Commission finding that such revocation would not injure the U.S. pulp-producing industry.

A spokesman for the commission said the way in which the reversal came about was "unprecedented" in the 20 years the tariff commission has had the responsibility of making injury investigation.

The complicated case was also unique in that U.S. pulp producers—who once complained that imports of "northern bleached hardwood kraft pulp" from Canada were grabbing an unfair share of the American market — subsequently rallied to the Canadian side this summer and called for revocation of the anti-dumping determination.

Involved in the case are American Can of Canada Ltd., Consolidated Pontiac Inc., Domtar Pulp Ltd., Dryden Paper Co. Ltd., Eddy Forest Products Ltd., Ste. Anne-Nackawic Pulp and Paper Co., Ltd., and Thurso Pulp and Paper Co.

GARDENING
hilda beastall

Economists have reported more than once that some nations could live on what North Americans throw away. In Canada, the home gardener and the farmer often discard or neglect vegetables and fruits sufficient for many meals for themselves at least.

On a warm afternoon, much too warm for bending over dwarf bean plants to gather what I knew were the last of an earlier sowing, I pulled up a fist full of the plants instead.

In a shaded spot I decided to strip everything from the plants. Not only were there young pods to slice for two evening meals, but the older pods will make several good dishes.

Here is how I dealt with the job. Only 15 plants were pulled up at one time. This not only gave a change of work to prevent monotony but the end was always in sight temporarily at least.

If an interruption came, there was no huge pile of plants wilting with the young and old beanpods still attached.

The slim young pods went into a basin beneath a cold wet cotton dish towel to keep fresh until prepared for supper.

Billgy pods of more maturity which would be tough I put into another basin for a different use.

On another day these pods were opened, the beans removed and gently simmered for 15 minutes in as little water as possible.

They were a real delicacy, somewhat resembling fresh green limas. With a little bacon, small whole potatoes and thick slices of red rip Coldset tomatoes, a fine meal.

Another day when time is kind, more bean plants will be dealt with in the same way. If the weather is cooler, the semi mature little beans from the pods will make a grand soup.

The little beans are pale creamy green in the green pods; pale greyish mauve in the wax pods. Both turn dark when cooked.

Occasionally a few dried pods turned up on the drying plants, with dried beans rattling inside.

These too were shelled into a separate dish to be completely dried by exposure to warm air.

Later in the season, these dried beans will make a nourishing protein meal with a few soybeans, both kinds soaked overnight before cooking.

All these meals will have been possible because it wasn't assumed there were no more usable pods on the yellowing faded bean plants. They grew on the far edge of the plot, many feet from the later sown vegetables which have been getting the regular watering.

Anyone looking at them would have said "Pull them up and throw them on the compost heap. They are no more use." Only by handling these bean plants in small quantities was their value discovered.

The same thing can happen with pea vines. Don't discard them without stripping every pod, old and young.

And do them a few at a time so you don't miss any which will make another meal. It's a chance to prove that we at least don't waste food.

'Listen to Labor' CLC Warns Gov't

HALIFAX (CP) — John Simonds, executive secretary of the Canadian Labor Congress, told the federal government today to listen to inflation-fighting suggestions from labor or face greater unrest.

Mr. Simonds, addressing the annual convention of the Nova Scotia Federation of Labor, said 1975 looks like a bad year, with inflation running at 12 per cent and unemployment climbing to seven per cent or more.

"Our government must take decisive action to get our economy moving—and moving quickly," he said.

"There is a great deal of concern in Canada over labor unrest, particularly with the increasing number of so-called illegal strikes. I suggest to you that there should be concern— not over the strikes but with the reasons for the strikes."

A text of his speech was released in advance.

In the first six months of 1974, the amount of time lost due to work stoppages was mounting at a record pace. To the end of June 5.2 million man-days were lost, many as unions tried for interim wage increases to beat inflation.

Mr. Simonds said labor unions are saying to their members that they must protect themselves against inflation and that they had accepted the advice.

"And if we have employers in this country who refuse to recognize the plight of the worker who is not protected by a cost-of-living clause in his agreement or a worker who is tied to a long-term agreement, then those employers, in failing to face up to their responsibility, are going to be in trouble—and well they should be."

Mr. Simonds said domestic action by the government to fight inflation should include tax cuts for those in lower income groups, pension adjustments based on price increases in food and housing rather than on the full consumer price index, mortgage money available at eight per cent interest and cuts in government spending on "bureaucratic expansion."

"What I am saying is that the government of this country had better heed what we are saying," Mr. Simonds said.

"We want action and we want it now.

"If the prime minister and his government think that Canadian workers are going to placidly line up in front of soup kitchens again as they did in 1929 and 1930, then they are in for one hell of a surprise."

When you wait 44 years for a drink with your brother you build up a heck of a thirst . . . especially if you're a Tynesider. Jimmy Thompson (left) of Hamilton, Ont. lost track of his brother David, after the younger Thompson returned to Newcastle after a few months in Canada in 1930. Jimmy's daughter caught up with her uncle on a trip to Britain last year and the two were reunited this week. First thing they did was crack a jar.

Officer's Cop-Out Ruse Just Trick

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police officer Anthony Vitaliano, 27, spent most of Tuesday afternoon acting like a crooked cop and getting drunk while on duty.

His commander says he'll be promoted to sergeant very soon.

Vitaliano, an undercover policeman with the public morals division, used the corruption ruse to stall for time when the extortion gang he infiltrated found out who he was and took him for a ride to Brooklyn — at gunpoint.

The racketeers had taken a liking to him, according to inspector Charles Peterson. So they took him for drinks to a bar in Coney Island used as a hideout. Those who thought Vitaliano could still be trusted argued with those who thought otherwise.

And while Vitaliano stalled for time, downing drink after drink, police who had scoured Brooklyn trying to rescue him finally located his car outside the bar. They were waiting when the cop and his captors came staggering out, and safely rescued him.

Vitaliano's 3½ hour "ordeal" began around 2 p.m. when he showed up in his car at a Lower East Side intersection in his assigned role as a "collection agent for the protection racket," which preyed on prostitutes, madams, massage parlor operators and small-time gamblers, according to police.

However, the gang members caught a glimpse of his revolver, found papers in the car indicating Vitaliano was a policeman, pulled a gun and warned he "would have his head shot off," police said.

After denials didn't work, Vitaliano admitted he was a cop but said he was a "bad one." He told the racketeers that "this is the way he always made his money," according to Peterson.

They ordered him into the car and drove toward Brooklyn. Vitaliano's worried backup team followed, but lost the car in traffic.

An all-out search was launched. A police helicopter spotted the car as it was headed for Coney Island, but then lost it.

Police cars were dispatched to various locations known to be hangouts for the gang, and one finally spotted Vitaliano's car.

At 5:30 p.m., the captors and their hostage staggered out. Four suspects three men and a woman, surrendered to police without a struggle. Five other suspects were arrested at other two locations, and the nine were variously charged with kidnapping, extortion and weapons violations.

Noting Vitaliano's glassy-eyed condition, police took him to Coney Island hospital in the mistaken belief he had been drugged or was in shock.

OTTAWA — Health Minister Marc Lalonde has scotched a rumor that he's a teetotaller.

"Oh no, I'm not," he said Tuesday when asked to confirm a report on a speech to the Brewery Association of Canada here which said he does not smoke or drink.

"I drink beer, I drink gin . . . and I love wine," he said.

LAWRENCE

BENOIT

WASHINGTON — Donald Rumsfeld, a young turk in his days as a GOP congressman 10 years ago, has replaced Alexander Haig as the top White House aide. Rumsfeld, 42, returns to Washington from his current post as ambassador to NATO as soon as President Ford names a successor to him. White House press secretary Ron Nessen indicated Rumsfeld would not wield as much power and presidential protection as Haig and predecessor H. R. Haldeman did under Nixon.

OTTAWA — Bert Lawrence, a former member of the Ontario cabinet, today announced his resignation from the legislature effective immediately. Lawrence, a 51-year-old Ottawa lawyer, named Ottawa Mayor Pierre Benoit as his most likely successor in the riding of Carleton East.

WASHINGTON — Joseph Alsop announced in his syndicated column today he is retiring at the end of this year Alsop, 64 said he plans to travel around the world.

"The reporter's trade is for young men," Alsop wrote. "Your feet, which do the legwork, are nine times more important than your head, which fits the facts into a coherent pattern."

ROME — A funny thing happened to Ontario Premier William Davis on his way to the forum Tuesday. The incident took place in front of Trevi fountain where a television team was attempting to interview Davis when a portly policeman came running up, shouting that filming was illegal.

Inspector John Closs of the Ontario Provincial Police, who is accompanying Davis as a security man, flashed his badge. The Roman policeman waved it away.

But he apparently abandoned the idea of arresting the whole group and settled on Colin Allison, a CBC cameraman who "escaped" to the safety of the Davis bus when John Downing, a six foot two inch, 280-pound columnist for the Toronto sun planted himself firmly in front of the policeman and demanded to know who his superior officer was.

LONDON — Richard Burton says he still loves Elizabeth Taylor and she feels the same way about him, but they just can't get along with each other.

Asked about reports Elizabeth is planning to marry Henry Wynberg, the man who showed up when he moved out, the actor paused for a moment.

"Ah, well," Burton finally said. "Elizabeth is such a moral person that unquestionably she will marry this chap. She's not a layabout. If she goes to bed with someone she marries them."

Kurds Await Snow as Ally

RABANUK MOUNTAIN, Iraq (AP) — An out-manned and out-gunned Kurdish army —the Pesh Merga—is holding out in these rugged mountains hoping that the snows soon will stop the advance of the Iraqi army.

Since the thaws of March, the Iraqi air and ground forces have been trying to break the back of the long Kurdish fight for autonomy.

From this Kurdish mountain outpost this week, Soviet-built SU-7 fighter-bombers of the Iraqi air force were seen bombing and strafing the Pesh Merga on a ridge below.

Ali Mustafa Omar, a grizzled 51-year-old Pesh Merga veteran and supply master for this Kurdish-held area of Northern Iraq, watched quietly. His grey, baggy uniform was nearly the same color as the barren dusty earth. Artillery fire erupted, the booms echoing through the mountains, as Iraqi troops began pounding the Pesh Merga-held ridge. In answer, Pesh Merga guns from other peaks began firing into the Iraqi-controlled valley far below.

"If we had a quarter of the guns they have, we'd drive them down to Baghdad," says Omar, rubbing his chin. "We never think of defeat. When winter comes and they must stick to the roads, we'll push them back."

The fighting since March has produced nearly half a million refugees, but so far no solution or settlement seems near.

Fighting broke out when the Kurds rejected a limited autonomy plan offered by the government in Baghdad, Iraq's capital. Since then, the Kurds say, they have killed 3,261 Iraqi soldiers and wounded more than 5,000 others. The Kurds claim 157 Iraqis have been captured including a jet pilot.

The Kurds put their own casualties at almost 400 Pesh Merga plus more than 400 Kurdish civilians killed.

FLEE TO IRAN

In addition, the Kurds say, nearly half a million of their people have been made homeless by the fighting and bombing of population centres. About 90,000 of these refugees have fled to neighboring Iran where they are being housed in tent camps for the winter.

No casualty or refugee figures have been released in Baghdad which says nothing more than a few skirmishes are going on.

A number of Kurdish towns, including Rawanduiz, Ranya, Qalat Diza and Diana, which can be seen in the valley below this mountain, fell in the heavy August push by the Iraqis and the advance still threatens to sever the Kurdish-held areas to create new communication and supply problems.

The Pesh Merga is basically armed with Soviet and Chinese-made AK-47 automatic rifles and Second World War bolt-action rifles. They have mortars, recoilless rifles, anti-aircraft guns and some light field artillery.

Iraq has charged that Iran and Israel are providing arms and ammunition to the Kurds, but this is not admitted here. "We have many sources," says one Kurd with a smile. "We have bought some guns on the black market."

Business as Usual, Despite Court Rule

VANCOUVER (CP) — Air Club International will continue business as usual despite a U.S. Civil Aviation Board order for it to cease operations, Canadian manager Joe Lewis said Tuesday.

He said the order will be appealed to the court of appeals in San Francisco and a final court decision could take two years.

In Washington, a CAB spokesman confirmed that the club might be able to obtain a stay of execution of the CAB order pending adjudication.

The C.A.B. gave the club until Nov. 22 to cease operations, saying that there could be hardship if time were not given for it to carry out current commitments.

The delay, however, was conditional on the club's halting solicitations of members and advertising of flights.

The C.A.B. accused Airclub International of operating as a common air carrier in violation of the U.S. Aeronautics Act.

The club engaged in "indiscriminate solicitation of every member of the public with as little as $15 in his pocket, $25 for a family," the C.A.B. said, the club was offering transportation at reduced rates, and the reason for its existence was the provision of transportation.

The C.A.B. included Seattle travel promoters Joel and June Eisenberg, founders of Air Club International, in its cease and desist order. Eisenberg was formerly president of the club; Mrs. Vanetta Warren of Seattle is current president.

Lewis said the club has 30,000 members in Canada and 40,000 in the United States.

The club has offices in Vancouver and Victoria, but flights are from Seattle-Tacoma International Airport.

SOLUTION THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

At the conclusion of play in a Novice Game at the 1974 Summer National Championships, an American Contract Bridge League staff member was giving a lecture to the players on the subject of the difference in approach between rubber bridge and tournament bridge (duplicate). After he had spoken for about 10 minutes, one of the ladies present turned to her partner an dsaid: "Well, I guess we'd better go home."

But the other replied: "Not on your life! We're getting the very same stuff free that our bridge teacher charges us $40 for."

One of the differences between the two games is that "psychic" bidding arises much more frequently in duplicate bridge than in rubber bridge. The reason is obvious: a psychic bid can often be expensive, and its wielder might lose 1100, 1400, 1700, etc. points; and in rubber bridge he has to pay for his loss in cash. But in duplicate bridge, with each deal being the equivalent of each other, a 1400-point loss can easily be regained on the next deal by fulfilling a mere two-club contract by brillian play.

In the 1974 Life Masters Pairs Championship, our South declarer in today's deal came up with a psychic bid that turned out very profitably for his side. Neither side vulnerable. East deals.

Neither side vulnerable. East deals.

♣ 10 9 7 6 2

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♠ (!)	Dbl.	4 ♠
Dbl.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♦.

As can be observed, South's psychic one-spade opening bid was fabricated out of thin air. West's take-out double was normal, as was North's preemptive raise to four spades. East was faced with a tough problem, and he decided to take his sure profit by making a penalty double.

The four-spade contract was set three tricks, giving East-West 500 points. But, as is evident, East-West could have made a grand slam in either seven notrump, seven hearts, or seven diamonds. And the slam would have netted East-West over 1400 points. So, on this day, the psychic bid paid a nice dividend.

Million Lottery Sales

B.C. ticket sales for the first Western Canada lottery have topped the one million mark, Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall said Tuesday.

Hall said more than 400,000 tickets at $2.50 each have been sold by the 400 non-profit societies licensed in the province.

Figures were not available on sales in Alberta, Saskatchewan or Manitoba, which will account for the remainder of the lottery total.

Ticket sales end Oct. 9 and a preliminary draw will take place Oct. 23 to pick 1,900, $100 prize winners, and an additional eight winners who will be flown to Winnipeg Nov. 2 for the final draw.

Top prize is $250,000.

Hall said tickets for the second Western Canada lottery will be available starting Oct. 10 and the draw set for early 1975. Four lotteries a year are planned.

Demerit System in Chaos

City Already Past Road Death Record

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

This year could be the worst ever for traffic fatalities in the greater Victoria area leading to calls for a heavy enforcement program.

Already 35 people have died in road mishaps, four more than in all of 1973.

Police officials fear the number will climb even higher as the dark nights of winter close in, a time generally fraught with serious motor vehicle accidents.

Only Oak Bay has been fatality free — an enviable record that dates back to July, 1970.

In all other muncipalities the number of fatalities has either reached or exceeded the 1973 figures.

Saanich has had 10 fatalities so far, up two for the whole of last year. Sidney, with five, is also up two.

Victoria, with nine, Colwood, with seven, Sooke, with two, and Esquimalt and Central Saanich each with one, are all the same as 1973 year-end tallies in their respective areas.

Traffic experts can offer no definitive explanation for the startling increase in road deaths.

However, police officials interviewed Tuesday clearly felt there has been a deterioration in the respect for safe driving in recent years.

They cited public apathy, indifference and a total disdain for traffic regulations as principle factors in the decline.

The laws are not just being infringed either, they are being "flagrantly abused" and "wilfully disobeyed," Colwood RCMP Cpl. Lance Bailey said.

"A voluntary compliance of the laws just doesn't occur," he said.

A traffic expert with 14 years experience, Bailey considers the major causes of accidents speeding and following too close.

But traffic deaths nearly always show alcohol involved somewhere, he said. There is evidence of alcohol in six of this year's seven fatalities in the Colwood area.

The deaths in Saanich have perplexed police officials. All have occurred in good weather, on dry roads, under what could be considered ideal driving conditions.

How do they happen then?

The majority can be attributed to excessive speed, Insp. Ted Owens said.

Owens, who has just returned from a motor trip to Alberta, said he sees "more crazy things happening on the roads in Victoria than any of the other places I visited."

"We seem to have a lackadajsical type of driver here. The people just don't seem to

An avalanche of driver's licence suspensions is creating serious problems for the B.C. Motor Vehicle branch.

"We just can't cope with the workload," Adolphe Repasse, supervisor of driver safety and improvement said in an interview Tuesday. "The situation is really getting out of hand.

"Unless we make some drastic changes I don't know what we are going to do.

"I could stand at least 10 additional staff to cope with the suspension picture we have now."

Some suspensions are taking as long as a year to process, he said. The present backlog runs between 2,000 and 3,000:

"We have files piled up around us like cord wood.

"It's a very serious situation. If we want to keep on with the program we are going to have to get more staff."

Repasse isn't the only one disturbed by the situation. Saanich police Insp. Ted Owens had some hard hitting comments of his own.

"Suspension has become a joke," he said. "We've had people with 60 and 70 demerit points and still driving. They just laugh at us.

"A senior RCMP official told me of a person in Vancouver who had 60 demerit points and was bragging about it.

"Yet nothing was happening to him.

"Unless people know there is action at the end of the line . . . the penalty of suspension is entirely lost."

At present the driver's licence suspension division has a staff of 28 typists, clerks and analysts. In addition there are 70 examiners handling outside interviews around the province.

Repasse estimated his staff will process about 250,000 records of convictions and traffic violation reports as well as more than 20,000 notices of intent and actual suspensions this year.

The figures have been soaring each year.

He said besides the critical staff shortage part of the problem was the Motor Vehicle Act which details how suspensions must be processed.

Suspensions may be handed down by a judge and they take effect immediately.

However if the judge doesn't suspend — and relatively few do according to Repasse — then it's up to the Motor Vehicle Branch.

Only on drinking driving offences is suspension mandatory — one month for first offenders, six months for repeaters.

"But," said Repasse, "just because it's mandatory doesn't mean it is automatic."

It can take from three weeks to three months before the suspension order is finally made, and in that time the convicted drinking driver can drive with impunity.

The delays start at the police station, he said. By law

CALLEY

Judge Frees Calley

Times News Services

COLUMBUS, Ga. — A judge, citing a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling dealing with former president Nixon and the Watergate tapes, today overturned the My Lai murder conviction of former army Lieut. William Calley.

He ordered Calley freed immediately.

Judge J. Robert Elliott overturned Calley's conviction for the murder of 22 civilians in the hamlet of My Lai on the specific grounds of massive pretrial publicity, denial of Calley's rights to confront unfriendly witnesses and improperly-drawn charges.

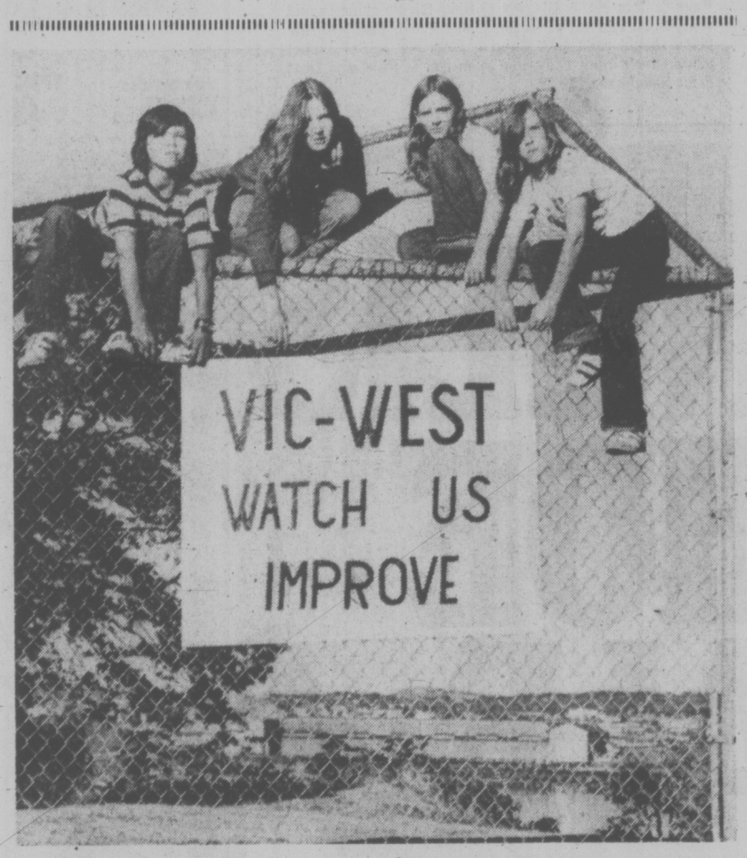
But Elliott said the Supreme Court, in ruling on the Watergate tapes, had, in effect, decided the Calley affair.

He noted that the court held that Nixon had to turn over the Watergate tapes, but that a committee of the House of Representatives that investigated the My Lai case had refused to turn over its transcript to Calley's defence lawyers.

Army attorneys, however, are expected to appeal the order immediately, and Elliott's ruling does not necessarily mean that Calley will be set free.

Calley is being held at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where he was taken after the army succeeded in having his bail revoked. Elliott earlier had set Calley free on bail after Calley took his case to the civilian courts, having exhausted his appeals before military tribunals.

Calley was sentenced to life imprisonment March 29, 1971, by a court-martial board. His sentence was reduced to 20 years by a military appeals board and then to 10 by Army Secretary Howard Callaway.



Signs of Vic West Pride

In an effort to promote community pride, Vic West is erecting "Vic West — Watch Us Improve" signs on all roads leading into the community.

The idea came out of the recent survey taken in conjunction with the Neighborhood Improvement Program. Vic West and James Bay are to share in $2 million in funds for improvement programs.

The idea was mentioned in August and this month the signs began appearing. Helping to erect this sign are from left: Trevor Tweedie, and Elaine, Gemma and Steven Agnew.

OTTAWA — Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson was stumped Tuesday at a news conference when asked to name a specific example of imaginative Canadian housing ideas he had referred to earlier.

The conference was held on the subject of Habitat, a United Nations conference on housing to be held in Vancouver in 1976, and Danson had emphasized that Canada already had examples of the type of housing ideas which would be discussed at Habitat.

"I'm on the spot," Danson admitted and deftly passed the question to his executive assistant, who snapped up to attention, and after a moment's hesitation suggested that an Urban Affairs official, sitting among the press people, could best answer.

"There are, unquestionably, a number of existing imaginative projects on housing in Canada," the official began, "but I would like a colleague of mine here to tell us of a particular project he has been working on himself."

The colleague reluctantly got up, cracked

The colleague reluctantly got up, cracked that "the buck stops here," and proceeded to describe what Canada had to offer in the way of imaginative housing ideas.

Project "Winter Warmth," he began, had evolved after studies by the Uban Affairs department had shown it would be difficult to move natives living in Northern settlements "to a middle-class house in middle class Toronto."

"The imaginative answer was to upgrade housing in the North—taking the Indian or Eskimo's home and providing it with a stove and insulation."

No other "imaginative" ideas were offered as examples of Canadian ingenuity and the news conference moved on to other subjects.

Mounties 'Infiltrated'

TORONTO (CP) — The RCMP fears that organized crime has infiltrated its security division, according to the Toronto Star.

In a copyright story from Ottawa, the newspaper quotes reliable sources as saying that this fear, plus reference to a clandestine operation by agents of United States military intelligence in Montreal, dominates a mass of top-secret information that may become public this week.

The Star says the sources claim the information is potentially dangerous to Canada and they are astonished that it may become public.

The documents are those filed with the federal Court of Appeal in a case involving an appeal by two former RCMP security agents against their dismissal last December. The court has ruled that the documents in the case of Don McCleery and Gilles Brunet are to be made available as evidence in the case.

The Star says that the best information available indicates evidence shortly to be releasel will show:

—The RCMP has grave fears that it has been infiltrated and perhaps used by organized crime, which in turn is moving into legitimate fields of business and industry as it has in the U.S.

—At least two officers of U.S. Military Intelligence were in Canada for a period of months, conducting clandestine operations on behalf of Washington with at least the tacit approval of the RCMP.

—Illegal wiretaps are used by the RCMP as a matter of course, and these infringe on a broad sector of society normally considered immune to invasions of privacy in a free society.

Nixon Has Lung Clot

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Richard Nixon has a blood clot in his right lung "which is a potentially dangerous situation," his doctor said today.

Dr. John C. Lungren said that the clot, which moved through blood vessels from Nixon's leg, was found through tests conducted by a specialist in nuclear medicine.

There was a good chance for Nixon to recover, but it would take some time, he added.

He revealed that he had suspected the lung clot since Sept. 11 when he visited Nixon while he was staying at the home of U.S. ambassador to Britain, Walter Annenberg, in Palm Springs.

Lungren said Nixon probably would be hospitalized at least until the middle or end of next week.

Exporter Bid for Eggs, CEMA Let Them Rot

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto exporter said Tuesday his order for 50 million eggs was rejected in April by the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) because the price offered was too low.

Andrew Tuval, president of Rexim International Ltd., a food broker, said he had the order, from one of Austria's largest food importers, signed in the Canadian Embassy in Vienna with the Canadian Trade Commission there as witnesses.

Tuval said the CEMA need not have wasted any of the 28 million eggs recently found rotting in storage areas if it had pushed European exports.

"But I saw no evidence the egg agency was interested."

Canadian eggs, he said, have better flavor, color and sanitary conditions than the East European eggs usually sold in Austria, which is a major importer of eggs. If the price had been right, a good market could have been developed, he added.

Rexim was developing the Austrian market with the help of the Ontario Egg Producers Marketing Board, with Rexim working on commission. Experimental air shipments of eggs to Vienna were started in late 1973 with the Ontario board's help.

But when the national egg surplus began to mount last spring, CEMA took over export responsibilities from the provincial boards along with responsibility for disposing of the surplus.

"We bowed out and turned Mr. Tuval and his order over to CEMA," Brian Ellsworth, manager of the Ontario board, said.

Réxim's offer to CEMA "was in the low range," recalled Henry Pauls, director of market development for the Ontario food council, a branch of the agriculture department.

"But the point is that every offer should have been looked

U.S. Banks Chop Their Prime Rate

NEW YORK (UPI) — Several major U.S. banks today lowered their prime interest rates from the record high of 12 per cent to 11¾, indicating a slight easing in the tight money situation imposed to control inflation. The Texas Commerce Bank of Houston and Manufacturers Bank of Los Angeles also announced reductions.

OTTAWA (UPI)— Finance Minister John Turner said today he expects to bring down a new budget before November 15. Israeli Planes Pound Lebanon

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli jets bombed and strafed Palestinian targets in southern Lebanon today less than seven hours before the start of Yom Kippur, holiest day of the Jewish calendar and anniversary of the 1973 Arab-Israeli war. Reports from Sidon, Lebanon said no Palestinian guerrillas were killed or wounded in the raids, which followed similar attacks Tuesday, but plantations were destroyed and woods set ablaze.

Marguerite's Last Trip

Victorians who want to take a last "sentimental journey" aboard the doomed Princess Marguerite will have their final chance to do so on Saturday, when the CP vessel makes its last full run to Seattle and back.

Sunday's sailing will be a charter trip and the final sailing Monday will be strictly one-way, from Seattle to Victoria.

News of the service termination has been greeted with gloom and despondency by Victoria's tourist industry (see story page 13).

Free Enterprise Rallies Socreds

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS — Social Credit delegates left their policy think-tank Tuesday with a hefty bundle of resolutions re-affirming their allegiance to free enterprise in B.C.

Sixteen policy workshops had finished their deliberations in the morning and the remainder of the day was spent in a lengthy recital of the 63 pages of resolutions hammered out at the two-day session.

As the 200 delegates gathered to hear the results of their work, Socred leader Bill Bennett reminded them the resolutions are only one step in the process which will lead to a new Social Credit policy at the annual convention in Vancouver this November.

The workshop papers, prepared with the help of invited experts in various fields, will now go back to constituency associations for discussion in preparation for the November gathering.

But despite Bennett's cautioning, the delegates displayed obvious confidence in the success of their recommendations.

Their confidence and exuberance was heightened when party president Grace McCarthy read a telegram on the results of the first Socred door-knocking campaign in Cowichan-Malahat consitutency.

"Out of 60 homes visited, 46

VANDALS HIT BEN GINTER

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Vandals did an estimated $50,000 damage to the home of industrialist Ben Ginter during the weekend.

A police spokesman said the size of footprints indicated children were responsible.

Every room in the 9,000-square-foot mansion was ransacked, windows were smashed and upholstery was slashed.

Just Too Many Volunteers

Police today had to turn away volunteers wanting to join in the search for two-year-old Yehudi Prior, lost in rugged terrain 10 miles south of Shawnigan Lake Monday.

"We don't want to end up having to hunt for volunteers who get lost in the bush," an RCMP spokesman said.

The search has entered its second day for the boy, only child of William and Ann Prior, both in their early 20s.

The boy apparently wandered off while the couple was picking berries about half a mile from their home, a rough cabin situated on land owned by MacMillan and Bloedel in a remote area north and west of the Port Renfrew Road. A logging road is the only access to the site.

RCMP in Shawnigan Lake said Prior notified them at 5 p.m. Monday that his son had disappeared about two hours earlier but thought he could find him himself.

"He wondered if someone — loggers or trail-bike riders — had reported seeing the child," the police spokesman said.

"We didn't hear from him again until the next morning when he came into our office to request assistance in a search."

About 20 searchers, including police and members of the Duncan volunteer search and rescue group combed a one square mile area Tuesday where the boy was last seen.

A tracking dog was brought in from Nanaimo Tuesday afternoon but failed to pick up any scent.

The search resumed at dawn today.

Ferry Cut Called Ploy

- Tourist industry sees serious revenue losses
- B.C. Ferries has 'obligation to fill the gap
- City council is 'as much to blame as anyone'

By PAUL MOSS
and PAT DUFOUR

Canadian Pacific was accused today of using the closure of its Seattle-Victoria ferry service as leverage to close down the rail service between Victoria and Courtenay.

Les Woods, manager of the Undersea Gardens, said Tuesday's announcement that the Princess Marguerite will end the service with its final sailing next Monday appears to be a political ploy on the company's part.

By using the loss of the Marguerite as a threat, Woods said, CP can ease through with minimum opposition its plan to abandon the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway operation.

He claimed the reluctance of Washington State Ferries and the Black Ball Transport company to show any interest in providing a service on that route is understandable, because they "don't know what CR is up to."

Reactions of tourist industry representatives were filled with predictions of serious revenue loss, particularly to attractions and businesses in the Inner Harbor and lower Government Street areas which depend heavily on pedestrian tourists.

Several operators used the world "disaster" in interviews with the Times, and foresaw the death of the tourist industry unless a Seattle-Victoria ferry service can be continued by some means.

In most cases they called on the provincial government to fill the gap with a B.C. Ferries vessel, one entrepreneur terming it a "moral obligation."

Saanich and the Islands MLA Hugh Curtis also supported the idea of such a service, operated either by B.C. Ferries alone or in conjunction with Washington State Ferries.

Opposition leader Bill Bennett said the service might be better offered by private enterprise, as the ferry operates outside B.C. boundaries, but if the private sector doesn't respond to a proven need the government should step in.

But Transportation Minister Robert Strachan said there are no such plans at the present time, and Travel Industry Minister Ernie Hall couldn't be reached for comment.

Spokesmen for both the Washington State Ferry Service, operating the Anacortes-Sidney run, and Black Ball, operating the Port Angeles-Victoria service, predicted problems next summer due to extra passenger loads on their services.

Ralph White, Washington State Ferries assitant general manager, declined to say whether his company would consider running a replacement vessel on the Seattle-Victoria route.

Pat Frumento, Victoria manager for Black Ball, said his company has no real option in the matter because it simply has no vessel available for that route.

Ald. Bill Tindall, chairman of Victoria's tourism and commerce committee, said the effect on the city's tourist industry is "almost impossible to calculate."

In the four months up to the end of August this year the Princess Marguerite carried 104,000 passengers, he noted. Assuming the average expenditure per person to be only $15 — it was more likely $25 — that represented a future loss to the community of at least $1.5 million.

"I think it is incumbent upon the provincial government to look seriously at replacing this run," Tindall said. "It is a matter of vital concern."

Woods said during the "magic 100 days" of the summer season the Marguerite probably earned her keep. He said CP could probably balance the books if she and the Princess Patricia were used as convention centres when the ships are tied up alongside during the off season.

By taking off the Marguerite, CP is also dealing a bad blow to its Empress Hotel, for many years a losing proposition, according to CP directors.

"It's going to affect the Empress very drastically," said manager Bill Gray. "Along with the whole of the downtown area."

Apart from the hotel's afternoon teas, mainly patronized by the Marguerite's passengers, room bookings would drop because her passengers stayed at the hotel in "colossal numbers."

Gray was adamant that the B.C. Ferries should step in and provide service between Victoria and Seattle.

"The provincial government is in the business of transportation," Gray said. "And this (the Seattle-Victoria run) is just as important a highway as any of the others."

George Devlin of the Prince Albert Collection of Miniatures says if the provincial government doesn't step in and fill the gap it will be dealing itself a financial blow.

Devlin said at least 40 per cent of the passengers on each run pay for tours on government-owned buses.

"They (the government) have probably got more to lose than anybody else," he said, "They might as well retire half their tour buses and lay off all the bus drivers."

Dentist Dr. Arnold Lane, owner of the Royal London Wax Museum, predicted the service cancellation would be "a disaster not only for us but the whole of downtown Victoria."

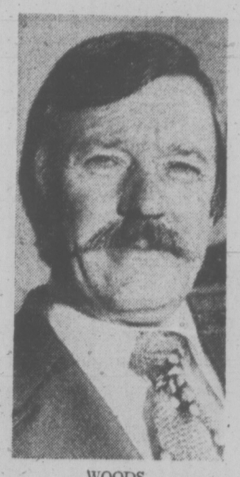
He said the vessel's passengers have always accounted for a significant proportion of the museum's business. "Over the years CP have phoned us from Seattle to tell us the number of people aboard, so we could adjust our staff accordingly."

Lane said Victoria city council is "as much to blame as anyone," because when the company proposed some years ago the development of its Inner Harbor property, partly as a means of underwriting the ferry service, the city turned down the idea.

He said B.C. is happy enough to rake in the revenue that tourism generates, yet the present mayor of Victoria gives the impression that he is "telling the $3 boys to stay home," while the minister of highways seems to dislike the influx of American motorists on our roads.

"The Americans are our greatest friends but some of our leaders don't know it," Lane said.

"If tourism is our greatest industry, and I think it is, the obligation must fall on someone to take up the slack left by CP."



WOODS

LANE

Rather than acquiring the service outright it might be cheaper for the province to underwrite the cost of CP's operation, he suggested.

At the Sydney Reynolds chinaware store in the Belmont Building, strategically located for souvenir-hunting tourists, proprietor Geoffrey Reynolds admitted business would suffer appreciably from the loss of the Marguerite bringing up to 2,000 passengers daily in peak periods.

The whole tourist industry would be affected, incurring a "tremendous loss in revenue," he said.

"Something else will have to be put on if we want this town to survive."

Al Frame, manager of the Classic Car Museum, agreed the provincial government couldn't allow the run to be cancelled. It should either take it over or have CP carry on with a different type of ship, capable of carrying more cars.

"We do surveys all the time," he said, "And, at the very miniumu, 10 per cent of our business comes from that ship."

Frame said Bob Nixon, manager of the Greater Victoria Visitors Information Centre was "selling it short" when he evaluated revenue from the Marguerite this season as $9 million.

Lloyd Davies, president of the Downtown Business Association, said he would like to see some other branch of free enterprise, perhaps the Black Ball company, fill the gap left by the closure of the CP ferry service.

Rent Crisis Brings Call For Mobiles

A proposal to establish a mobile home park on the outskirts of Victoria, for use as emergency housing during the current rental crisis, will be presented today to government officials by the Victoria Rental Aid Service.

The suggestion, along with four others, will be presented to Premier David Barrett, Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson and all local mayors.

Jim Nelson, director of Rental Aid, will submit the written proposals and "keep on sending them letters and meeting with them," he said, so the politicians don't just "throw them in the garbage."

The four other proposals include:

—Establishment of a co-operative for the construction and rental of prefabricated homes, as a joint venture between government and the private sector, and the use of "able-bodied men now unemployed and receiving assistance" in construction to lower costs.

—Government purchase of motels or apartment units for use as emergency housing.

—Provision of mortgages through co-operation between government and the private sector so people can purchase homes with money loaned at low interest rates.

—Government provision of mortgages at low rates of interest so more people can own homes and ease the pressure on existing rental facilities.

Nelson compiled the suggestions after two years of working with renters and learning their problems, and made them public at a Tuesday night meeting held at the Community Action Group headquarters on Fisgard.

Indians See Halt To Clam Digging

A B.C. fisheries regulation which prohibits shell fishing within 400 feet of a marina would stop the Tsawout Indian Band from collecting clams on its own shoreline, band manager Gus Underwood said today.

The government regulation sets 400 feet as the minimum shellfish closure area around a marina to guard against people collecting contaminated shellfish.

The 400-foot boundary would be the minimum imposed around the planned Saanichton Bay Marina and the closure would include some of the Tsawout Indian Band's shoreline in the bay.

Del McCaw, a provincial fisheries inspector, said the 400-foot closure was a minimum, and, depending on the size of the marina, 800 or 1,000 feet could be set as the shellfish boundary.

McCaw confirmed the Indian shoreline could be affected by the closure and said the final decision as to whether the Indians could collect clams on their own shoreline would have to be made by federal water quality inspectors.

"It's a safeguard against shellfish contaminated by sewage or effluent from a marina," McCaw said.

Underwood said today he was worried because the 400-feet closure would include the James Island wharf which is used by people from the area for shrimping and gathering crabs.

But McCaw said shrimp and crab are not affected by the regulation because they have separate digestive systems which are not eaten for food.

Clams and oysters would be the shellfish affected, he said, and oysters are not known to be abundant in the Saanichton Bay area.

Underwood said he would bring the closure regulation to the attention of Resources Minister Bob Williams at a meeting Friday. Williams has agreed to meet with six people opposing the marina, including Underwood, in his office Friday afternoon.

Underwood will give Williams a petition which has been in circulation since Monday, opposing the marina development.

"We have lots and lots of signatures on the petition and we're going to tell him we can get lots more if given a little more time," Underwood said.

Island Member Quits Arts Access Group

Southern Vancouver Island's representative on the provincial Arts Access committee has resigned because he feels the tradition of giving money to artists who are already established will continue.

"I don't feel I want to work just to keep things going the way they are," said Rients van Goudoever of Sooke, who quit at a recent meeting and said afterwards the committee should concern itself with broader cultural questions than the funding of individual artists and arts groups.

The committee, established a year ago, is examining current government policy toward artists and is discussing how policy should be changed to provide better artistic opportunity.

"It's more than individual artists who have to face the future" and a life of increased leisure, said van Goudoever, who added that the committee should be concerned with cultural growth for everyone.

If the committee aimed for establishment of a guaranteed annual income for artists, he said, individuals could pursue art without having to worry about working for profit.

"If the funds were available, then I could start thinking about what I really wanted to do," he said.

Committee members are agreed on some points such as abolition of Community Arts Councils which administer funds to the arts, said van Goudoever.

Members are divided on other issues, however, he said.

Van Goudoever also objects to the government's proposed setting up of interim boards in the wake of the arts councils and feels board representatives should be elected by popular vote.

Ask the Times

Q: Has there ever been a slave sale made in Canada and if so when and where?—J. K.

A: Yes. Slavery, although not a major factor in the development of Canada, according to Encyclopedia Canadiana, is a fact of our history and marketing and use of slaves was common until the beginning of the 19th century. French explorers and fur traders accepted the practice of Indians who frequently held as slaves men and women captured in tribal wars, and purchased Indian slaves for their own use. Negro slaves were imported into the French colony early in the 17th century. In Nova Scotia, the British who settled in Halifax in 1749 brought with them a large number of slaves. Legislation to outlaw slavery began as early as 1793 in Upper Canada, which prohibited import of slaves and gave freedom for slave children over 25.

A feature article in the June 8, 1974, issue of Weekend Magazine, carried in the Victoria Times, described the New Brunswick slave trade, involving the sale of paupers into slavery. It said the last public sale of people took place in Sussex, N.B., in 1898.

Aid Plea—Strings Attached

Continuation of mounting debts could eventually prove disastrous to the Victoria Symphony if no significant assistance is received, symphony president M. E. Ronahan warned today.

However, the current deficit poses no immediate threat to the symphony operation, she said.

The symphony has a $30,000 deficit from its 1973-74 season and a $33,000 deficit is projected for this season.

The Victoria Symphony Society decided Tuesday at a board of directors' meeting to launch a fund-raising drive to raise $75,000 next February and March.

Fund-raising activities of the society's special committee will also continue.

To date only $5,000 has been raised, but subscription to the fund are still dribbling in.

Ronahan admitted that the time is late for fund-raising efforts.

"We probably should have undertaken a major campaign several years back," she said.

Money from the spring campaign will be used one-third for operating expenses, one-third applied to the deficit and one-third for instrument renewal.

"People don't realize that instruments wear out and must be renewed," she said. "This is a major area of concern."

Tuesday's meeting was told that a quarterly newsletter to keep all members and season ticket subscribers informed on symphony matters will be published shortly.

It was reported that an acoustic shell, the gift of an anonymous American symphony supporter is now in place at the Royal Theatre and preliminary tests conducted by Maestro Laszlo Gati and some orchestra musicians indicate considerable sound improvement.

Four Games in Six Days No Cake Walk in Moscow

VANCOUVER — So now it's all or nothing at all for Team Canada in hockey's summit series which suddenly is a four-game set in the hallowed Luzhniki Arena in Moscow. And if anyone thinks the Canadian schedule was tough — four games in seven days — the Soviets have gone one better. Their four games will be crammed into six days starting Oct. 1 and finishing on Sunday Oct. 6 with back-to-back games on Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 5 and 6.

That may work more hardship on the Canadians than the Russians, it is felt, because of the younger legs of the Soviet national squad. But at least one Canadian player doesn't think so.

Pat Stapleton, probably the best defenceman on Team Canada, game in and game out, and a member of the Team Canada '72 team, feels that people tend to underestimate the '74 club.

"I think we came together pretty good in Edmonton," he suggested, while reminiscing that the talent laden '72 didn't actually begin to jell until after it had spent 10 days in Sweden. In addition, the present Canadian team is considered in better condition than its predecessor and should be that much more fit following exhibition games in Helsinki and Gothenbourg.

Stapleton also suggested that the larger ice surface in Moscow may not work entirely to the detriment of the Canadians because "we have a couple of players who can dangle. He mentioned Bobby Hull and Mike Walton. He could have added Ralph Backstrom and Rejean Houle. And, as a matter of fact, it will readily be recalled that Paul Henderson, the hero of the '72 series with three game winners is as many games, had no problem in Moscow with the ice.

Game Plan Vital to Success

The key, however, to the Canadians' chances has to be the game plan. One man in and one man only as a forechecker was the pattern that worked so successfully in the first two games, a 3-3 tie in Quebec City and a 4-1 Team Canada win at Toronto. Then in Winnipeg, with some different personnel, it fell apart. And in Vancouver on Monday there were also several indiscretions evident in the ranks of Team Canada.

Sure, Johnny McKenzie was the chief culprit, but he made no apologies. "That's the way I play," he said in the dressing room. And if this time perhaps it put an extra strain on the Team Canada defence, maybe the next time it will spur them on. Certainly he kept the Russians loose which again is part and parcel of the Canadian game.

And speaking of checking, for a moment, Hull brought the house down at a reception and au revoir dinner following the game, when he remarked "some years ago I was asked to represent the Black Hawks (of that other league) on Gordie Howe night in Detroit.

"I said then that in all my time in the NHL and playing against Gordie I had enjoyed every high-sticking moment of it. Tonight I think I can say that some of our visitors have enjoyed it too."

Earlier Howe, for his part, had said of a terrific check he threw at Boris Mikhailov early in the first period when the Russians were threatening to take control and were outplaying Team Canada by a wide margin, "I had him lined up all right, but my timing was off. If it had been on, I would have had him against the goalpost, not just into the net." Howe later threw the check that put Alexander Yarushev out of the game.

Old Pros Shouldn't Blow It

So the Russians, many of whom weren't even born when Howe started his NHL career, have learned to admire and respect this grand veteran. Because when Hull, was making his comments at dinner, the Russian players were listening to a synchronised transmission of his address in Russian. And many broke out in smiles when Howe's methods of greeting on the ice were mentioned. Some of them undoubtedly could have displayed the scars.

Still, it was a night of disappointment, really, the overall feeling being that old sweats should never have blown a three-goal lead. That's what hurt the most. Coach Billy Harris was most adamant. He felt the let-down was responsible for the tie result.

However, he wasn't about to throw in the towel. Rather he suggested: "You know it's hard for me to think this team could be improved; they have all given so much."

When asked by a Soviet press reporter if he would like to coach a team containing the likes of Bobby Orr, Phil Esposito, and other NHL stars of the '72 series, plus the WHA's best he said:

"You know, when I was asked to coach this team, it took me 10 seconds to decide to say 'yes.' Certainly with Orr and Esposito, it would be a better team and if I was asked to coach it, it wouldn't take me any longer to say 'yes' again. Besides, I love to travel."

All in all, however, until Game 5 in Moscow, it's the World Hockey Association which has won the most so far in the series. Given little chance to stay close to the Soviets, Team Canada certainly has won a new respect across the country.

And if I'm still not convinced that they can repeat the heroics of Team Canada '72, there are a few guys there who are going to give it a great try.

As Howe said at dinner. "We admire those Russian gentlemen very much, but we're sure going to try like hell to beat 'em."

He could have added: "Right Bobby?" And he wouldn't have been far wrong.

Cats Outscore Totems But Tie

By ERNIE FEDORUK

NANAIMO — Victoria Cougars scored seven goals and Seattle Totems counted only five but that didn't give the Western Canada Hockey League team a winning edge in Tuesday's exhibition game at Civic Arena.

Victoria defenceman Wade Smith slapped a rebound past his own goalie with a minute and 44 seconds left in the game and the Cougars had to settle for a 6-6 draw with the Totems.

It was the Cougars' second tie in as many nights but Victoria coach Pat Ginnell relished the latest one far more than Monday's 6-6 sawoff with Kamloops Chiefs of the WCHL.

Monday, the Cougars blew a 5-1 second-period lead.

Tuesday, the shoe went on the other foot. The Seattle entry in the Central Professional Hockey League held a 5-1 lead midway through the game and actually was fortunate to come out with the tie.

Cougars scored five straight times to take a 6-5 lead into the final few minutes. They appeared headed for victory until Smith scored on his own goalie, Bob Leslie.

Ginnell shrugged it off as "one of those things" and obviously was far more impressed with the Cougars' comeback efforts against the Vancouver Canuck farmhands.

More important, Ginnell feels the Tuesday exhibition may have uncovered a strong third line. So far, lines centred by holdover Mel Bridgman and newcomer Greg Miazga have carried Victoria's offense.

But Jim Gustafson, Al Hill and Rick Peter — united for Tuesday's exhibition — came up with an impressive performance. Peter scored two goals while Hill and Gustafson each counted one against Totems.

In addition to figuring in four of the six Victoria goals, the Gustafson-Peter-Hill unit came up with a strong checking performance. They were on the ice for only two of the six Seattle goals, including the one scored by Smith.

Dan Lucas and Don Cairns counted Victoria's other goals.

Defenceman Chris Murfey was credited with three of the Seattle goals, including the Smith effort. He also picked up assists on goals scored by Dan Seguin and Andy Spruce.

The other Seattle marker went to Dan Gloor.

The Orland Kurtenbach-coached Totems outshot Cougars 45-40 but, surprisingly, the Cougars came up with an edge in another department.

Victoria's juniors appeared to be bigger, generally, than the professionals.

"Definitely," thought Vancouver scout Larry Popein.

The Cougars continue their exhibition schedule with games tonight and Thursday in Kamloops, then return to Victoria for a return engagement with the Totems in Memorial Arena on Saturday.

GOING IS TOUGH for ball carrier Steve Ferrughelli of Montreal Alouettes, who found Calgary Stampeders too strong on defence Tuesday night. Stampeders won Canadian Football League game 38-13 on home ground.

Stamps Pull Upset But Injuries Costly

CALGARY (CP) — Calgary Stampeders pulled off one of the biggest upsets in the Canadian Football League this season Tuesday night with a 38-13 win over Montreal Alouettes. But Calgary coach Jim Wood was still singing the blues.

"We're going to need a witch doctor to get ready for Saskatchewan Sunday," said Wood after the Stampeders improved their record to 3-7 and moved to within four points of third-place Saskatchewan Roughriders in the Western Conference.

"We have a whole flock of injuries and won't know until tomorrow (Wednesday), but it doesn't look good."

The injured players that had Wood concerned include wily defensive tackle John Helton, with a muscle tear in his side; linebacker Mickey Doyle, with a strained knee; defensive end Jim Bond, also with a strained knee; and defensive end Larry Moore, with a pulled hamstring.

Wood was cautious about assessing Calgary's chances of gaining the third and final playoff spot.

Montreal, now 7-3 and two points up on second-place Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the East, fell apart at the beginning and never recovered. Three Calgary interceptions led directly to Stampeder touchdowns and quarterback Peter Liske guided the Calgary offence to 363 yards in the air and 53 on the ground.

"When it counted, Peter got us the points," Wood said. "The offensive line did a helluva job giving him protection, but the main thing was that Pete stayed with the game plan and executed perfectly."

Liske got the Stampeders on the scoreboard early in the first quarter with a 14-yard pass to Moody Jackson. Several plays later, Howard Starks picked off a pass by Montreal's Jimmy Jones and the Stampeders drove in to score on a 15-yard toss from Liske to Tom Forzani.

Less than a minute after the second touchdown, linebacker Roger Goree grabbed a Jones' pass and rumbled 25 yards into the end zone. Cyril McFall converted for a third time to give Calgary a 21-0 edge before about 20,000 wildly cheering fans.

Jones got seven points back before the quarter ended on a 32-yard pass to Larry Smith that was converted by Don Sweet.

Calgary's Jim Silye snared a Jones' pass at the Calgary 40 to set up the drive that ended when Don Willingham crashed over from the one. Jones had a fourth pass picked off in the first half, by Starks, but Calgary failed to turn that one into more points.

Less than one minute into the third quarter, Liske hooked up with Jackson on a 97-yard touchdown bomb. The rest of the scoring in the game was provided by Jones and Smith again on a 56-yard pass for Montreal and a 47-yard field goal by McFall, who made all the Calgary converts.

Despite the score, the Alouettes hurt their own cause with 14 penalties for a loss of 96 yards.

Soviet Ice Doesn't Worry Henderson

HELSINKI (UPI) — The Team Canada '74 hockey squad arrived today to establish a training camp and play warmup games before the resumption of their series against the Russian national team in Moscow Oct. 1.

Their red-and-white chartered Air Canada jet arrived from Vancouver in a driving rain at Helsinki airport. Most players said they were tired after their flight.

Team Canada warms up for the Russian series with a game against Finland Sept. 27, and against Sweden in Gothenburg Sept. 29.

The World Hockey Association team is tied with the Soviet Union, 1-1-2, after their first four games.

Paul Henderson of the Toronto Toros, who played on the National Hockey League team which won the Soviet series in 1972, said, "The WHA team is better prepared to play the Russians than were the NHL two years ago.

"One of our advantages is that Billy Harris knows the Russians pretty well after coaching Sweden a few years back. Besides, the Russian team hasn't changed much within the years and at least I know the players and their style pretty well. But what we are gaining in skating ability and shooting, the Russians are taking back in their systematic play.

"Still, I'm not too frightened about their home advantage. We did beat them in Moscow two years back, didn't we?" he said.

The Finnish team this year is far weaker than the team which nearly took the bronze medal in April in the world championships held at the same Helsinki ice hall. Two of the team's star players — captain Veli-Pekka Ketola and defenceman Heikki Riihiranta — defected to the WHA's Winnipeg Jets.

Bobby Hull, who switched to the WHA last year, said, "I think the European additions to the WHA makes the play more colorful and, so far, the Swedes and the Finns have done very well, very well on our team."

Gordie Howe of the Houston Aeros quipped back to Hull, "Yeah, good for you, bad for us."

★ BOTH LEAGUES NEXT SERIES?

OTTAWA (CP) — The team representing Canada in any future hockey series against the Soviet Union will have players from both the National Hockey League and the World Hockey Association if Health Minister Marc Lalonde gets his way.

Entering a cabinet committee meeting Tuesday, Mr. Lalonde said he is pleased with the results so far in the present eight-game series, tied with one win for each team and two ties.

"But I hope that once this one is over we can start planning for the next series in two years time with both leagues getting together.

"I hope this will be possible and I'll do anything I can to help it happen."

Mr. Lalonde said discussions are going on "at the international level" for the renewed participation of Canada in international hockey.

"This particular series is not a step towards that as such, but the last two series have certainly helped in the general context with the reappearance of Canada in the area of international hockey."

Asked if the current talks would lead to participation in world competition of a Canadian amateur team or if professionals would continue to represent this country, Mr. Lalonde said he cannot give any details while negotiations are in progress.

"However, I think we'll have some developments in the next few months."

Canada dropped out of top-level international amateur hockey several years ago after a prolonged dispute over the use of professional players.

In 1972, the Soviet Union agreed to an eight-game series against Team Canada '72, recruited from NHL teams. The current version of Team Canada consists of WHA players only.

Vancouver, Russ Meet on Games

Georgi Rogulsky, vice-chairman of the Sports Committee of the Soviet Union, met with Mayor Art Phillips of Vancouver Tuesday to compare notes on both parties' bid for the 1980 Olympic Games.

The Soviet Union has applied to the International Olympic Committee for the 1980 Summer Games, while Vancouver has made its application for the winter events of the same year.

Rogulsky said in an interview after the meeting that the preliminary estimate for the Summer Games in the Soviet Union would run to about 200 million rubles (about $70 million).

Vancouver Pair Makes Davis Cup Team

Canada's four-man team that will face Mexico in 1975 Davis Cup play here Oct. 4-6 was named Tuesday.

Rejean Genois of Quebec City, Pierre LaMarche of Montreal, along with two Vancouver players — Don McCorfick and Tony Bardsley were the choice of the selection committee.

Jean-Yves Laurin, president of the organizing committee for the tournament, said Mexico will be represented by Raul Ramirez Roberto Chavez, Joaquin Loyo-Mayo and second round of Davis cup competition, with Genois the only Canadian winner when he beat Luis Baraldi in three sets of the fifth match.

Official draw for the tournament will be held Oct. 3.

George MacCall, meanwhile, has been dismissed as commissioner of the World Team Tennis League, WTT president Frank Fuhrer announced. In a brief statement, Fuhrer said the dismissal arose out of policy differences between MacCall and the league's executive committee. He did not elaborate.

In football, British Columbia Lions placed Canadian wide receiver Bill Hogan on a five-day trial. Hogan, 24, was released this year by Edmonton Eskimos during exhibition play.

And Winnipeg Blue Bomber general manager Earl Lunsford announced the signing of Mark Gefert, a six-foot-two, 225-pound linebacker from Purdue University. Gefert, drafted this year by the Pittsburgh Steelers, was signed after a five-day trial. Defensive end Mike Dirks was placed on the injured list to make way for Gefert.

In shooting, the Soviet Union fired a world record 2,280 points to edge the United States and win the four-man team gold medal for the men's standard rifle Tuesday at the world championships. The United States, which had dominated rifle shooting since the 38th world events in Cairo in 1962, scored 2,278 for the silver medal, while Norway was third. Herman Saucer of South Africa won the men's individual event with 576 points.

Chemainus Dam Meeting Set Tuesday in Duncan

Some rambling notes along the trail:

Art Morton, one of four members of an action committee formed to battle construction of a mainstem water storage dam on the Chemainus River, reports a meeting has been called for 8 p.m. next Tuesday to acquaint members of the general public with the situation . . . The meeting will be held in the Duncan Eagles' Hall, located behind Buckerfields' store on the left side of the Island Highway just before crossing the Cowichan River heading up-Island . . . Plan to be there, we might just stop this thing yet.

Daryll Herbert, regional wildlife biologist for Vancouver Island, sent me some rather startling figures in response to a query about the 1974 spring carryover count . . . The carryover count, conducted and compiled a little late this year, determines the number of deer surviving from the previous year . . . As Daryll says: "Spring carryover counts are affected by hunting, but on Vancouver Island they are especially affected by habitat destruction and winter snow" . . . In the past 15 years there has been a definite declining trend, reflecting perhaps the increased cutting of timber required by deer for winter range . . . The figures, in per cent, are 1961 (34.0), '62 (37.2), '63 (34.0), '64 (27.8), '65 (25.0), '66 (26.6), '67 (27.9), '68 (28.9), '69 (16.1 — a bad winter), '70 (22.1), '71 (18.4), '72 and '73 (not available) and '74 (23.9).

Rayonier Canada has just released a brochure giving details on how to reach four trails, a picnic site and a wildlife reserve on southern Vancouver Island . . The trails provide access to Juan de Fuca Viewpoint (about 14.5 miles past Sooke), Sandcut Beach (about 17 miles past Sooke), Mystic Beach (3.7 miles past River Jordan) . . . The picnic site is situated on the Jordan River and the wildlife reserve is located near Honeymoon Bay on Cowichan Lake.

Sweden is proposing a rather unique approach to identifying ships responsible for oil spills . . . It seems the metal used to construct a ship has unique characteristics and, just as no two people have identical fingerprints, no two ships have exactly the same type of metal . . . Sweden's Environmental Protection Board proposes that sample metal scrapings be taken from every ship afloat . . . Analysis of oil found floating anywhere will then reveal traces of metal from the guilty ship.

Anybody going on a hunting trip to the northern Interior is reminded it is compulsory to stop at the Cache Creek checking station . . . The station is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week except between the hours of 11 p.m. Tuesday and 7 a.m. Wednesday of each week . . . Information obtained from hunters at this station, now in its 28th year of operation, helps wildlife biologists in their studies and management programs . . . This goes ditto for any other game check.

Richmond, Delta, Surrey and Langley will be the site of a Special Licence Hunting Area developed by the fish and wildlife branch with the co-operation of the four municipal governments, land owners and sportsmen's groups . . . A special licence ($5 in addition to the regular provincial hunting licence) will be required and hunters will also have to be in possession of $100,000 public liability insurance before the licence is issued to hunt in the four areas . . . It may seem like a lot to pay but I'd say the entire future of hunting in the lower Mainland area depends on the success of this project . . . And, considering the cost of everything else these days, the price of the pleasure is cheap.

Willie's Hit Sinks Cards

By The Associated Press

Despite an injured wrist, Willie Stargell managed a three-run homer Tuesday night to lead Pittsburgh Pirates to a 7-3 win over St. Louis Cardinals and a one-half game over the Cards at the top of the National League East.

In the West Division, Los Angeles' widened its lead as the Dodgers beat Atlanta Braves 2-1 in 10 innings. They remain five games ahead of Cincinnati Reds and reduced their pennant-clinching number to three.

In other National League games, Cincinnati beat Houston Astros 5-1, Philadelphia Phillies downed New York Mets 6-3, San Diego Padres edged San Francisco Giants 3-2 and, in a double-header, Chicago Cubs beat Montreal 6-4 before the Expos bounced back to romp 11-2 in the second game.

Stargell had been hit on the right wrist by a pitch in the sixth inning, but by the seventh inning, the pain was the furthest thing from Willie's mind as he hit his 24th homer of the year.

WILLIE DAVIS
. . . three-run blast

John Curtis stymied Pittsburgh on three hits before singles by Rennie Stennett and Manny Sanguillen got the Bucs going into the sixth.

Stargell was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Stennett scored on Richie Zisk's grounder, walks to Bob Robertson and Richie Hebner shoved the Pirates on top 2-1 before Parker got his hit.

In the seventh, Stennett and Al Oliver singled before Stargell unloaded his homer to left-centre field off Rich Folkers.

The Dodgers can clinch a tie for the West Divsion crown in their last home game tonight.

"It would be great to do it at home," said Ron Cey, whose eighth-inning home run brought the Dodgers into a 1-1 eighthinning tie.

Knuckleballer Phil Niekro had one-hit Los Angeles before Cey homered. Then, in the 10th, Steve Yeager doubled with two out, the Dodgers loaded the bases on two walks and Yeager dashed home when catcher Johnny Oates couldn't handle one of Niekro's fluttering pitches.

Johnny Bench signalled for a hit-and-run play, then did both, breaking a tie with a triple in a three-run fifth inning to help the Reds defeat Houston and keep alive Cincinnati's flickering pennant hopes.

Joe Morgan walked before Bench belted his three-bagger. Bench then came home on Milt May's passed ball, Dan Driessen singled, moved to second on an infield out and scored on Dave Concepcion's single.

Larry Bowa banged out three hits and knocked in two runs while Greg Luzinski hit a three-run homer in the Phillies' victory over New York.

Pinch-hitter John Grubb's sacrifice fly in the seventh inning lifted the Padres over San Francisco.

Willie Davis knocked in four runs, three with a homer, and Gerry Carter drove in three to give Montreal a split after Rick Monday and Bill Madlock hit two home runs apiece in the Cubs' first-game victory.

FANNING DENIES DAVIS ON BLOCK

MONTREAL (CP) — General manager Jim Fanning said today he has not been actively involved in an attempt to trade Willie Davis, the veteran centre fielder obtained by Montreal Expos this year from Los Angeles Dodgers.

"I have made no effort to trade him," Fanning said in an interview. "I have not fade one call to another club about him nor have I received one."

Reports here indicated that Davis, who came here in exchange for relief ace Mike Marshall before the start of the current National League season, was a sure bet to be with another team next year.

"That doesn't mean that his name hasn't been brought up," Fanning said. "I have had general conversations with other managers covering our respective rosters, but that's all."

Fanning said that outside of "some young players anybody on our club, including Davis" would be available after the seasons ends.

Bunt Boosts Orioles

By The Associated Press

A tie-breaking squeeze bunt by Andy Etchebarren brought Brooks Robinson home from third base, catapulting Baltimore Orioles past New York Yankees and into first place Tuesday night in the American League East.

Etchebarren's squeeze bunt allowed Robinson to score the winning run in the eighth inning and gave the Orioles a 5-4 victory over Detroit Tigers. The Yankees, who started the day with a one-game lead, dropped a twi-night doubleheader to Boston Red Sox 4-0 and 4-2 and fell to second place.

Baltimore's climb to the top of the AL East took some of the glamor away from Detroit's Al Kaline, whose fourth-inning double made him the 12th player in major league history to reach 3,000 hits for his career.

Elsewhere ine the American League, Milwaukee Brewers nipped Cleveland Indians 4-3 in 11 innings, California Angels defeated Kansas City Royals 9-3 and Oakland A's trimmed Minnesota Twins 5-1. Chicago White Sox' doubleheader at Texas Rangers was rained out.

Trailing 4-3 after seven innings, the Orioles tied the score on doubles by Don Baylor and Robinson in the eighth. Robinson moved to third on a wild pitch prior to Etchebarren's bunt.

Etchebarren, got his bat on the high curve-ball from Tigers' relief ace John Hiller and tapped the ball down the first base line. There was no play on Robinson, who scored with the winning run, and Etchebarren even beat it out for single.

The Yankees were stopped on six hits by Luis Tiant in the opener and on seven hits by Roger Moret in the nightcap.

The Orioles have seven games to go and the Yankees six in the regular season, which ends next Wednesday. Boston, in third place, is 3½ games behind the Orioles.

The second game was marred by rowdyism among some of the 46,448 at Shea Stadium in New York. Debris was hurled onto the field, including a bottle which splattered near home plate.

Gene Tenace's third grand-slam home run of the season helped the A's stretch their lead in the AL West to five games over Texas.

BARTON INJURED

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Greg Barton, Portland Storm's No. 2 quarterback, formerly a Toronto Argonaut, has cracked three ribs and will be sidelined for one to three weeks.

Al Kaline's Double Earns Immortality

BALTIMORE (AP) — Al Kaline achieved baseball immortality before the fans of his native Baltimore, but the Detroit Tigers' star was perhaps the calmest person in Memorial Stadium.

The 39-year-old veteran was given a rousing ovation by the slim crowd of 13,817 when he doubled in the fourth inning of Tuesday night's game to become the 12th player in major league history to reach the 3,000-hit plateau.

The game was halted for appropriate ceremonies honoring the occasion, but Kaline remained cool. He delivered a run-scoring single in the sixth, forging a 2-2 tie with the Orioles.

After Baltimore rallied for a crucial 5-4 victory in the American League's tight Eastern Division race, Kaline said the defeat was the only damper on the whole evening.

Referring to the reaching of his goal, Kaline said: "I'm happy it's over with, but I'm sorry we didn't win. That would have capped perfectly."

Detroit's designated hitter, once one of the game's best outfielders, had said this would be his final season if he reached the exclusive milestone. He didn't want to risk having a freak injury stand in his way.

"I would have much preferred to have gotten the hit in Detroit," he said. "But since it couldn't be Detroit, I'm glad it was here. My parents, my sister, my wife's parents and a lot of friends were here."

Playing in his 2,827th game, Kaline rapped out hit No. 3,000 in his 10,089th time at bat. It was his 498th double and the 972nd extra base hit of his career.

'Listen to Labor' CLC Warns Gov't

HALIFAX (CP) — John Simonds, executive secretary of the Canadian Labor Congress, told the federal government today to listen to inflation-fighting suggestions from labor or face greater unrest.

Mr. Simonds, addressing the annual convention of the Nova Scotia Federation of Labor, said 1975 looks like a bad year, with inflation running at 12 per cent and unemployment climbing to seven per cent or more.

"Our government must take decisive action to get our economy moving—and moving quickly," he said.

"There is a great deal of concern in Canada over labor unrest, particularly with the increasing number of so-called illegal strikes. I suggest to you that there should be concern— not over the strikes but with the reasons for the strikes."

A text of his speech was released in advance.

In the first six months of 1974, the amount of time lost due to work stoppages was mounting at a record pace. To the end of June 5.2 million man-days were lost, many as unions tried for interim wage increases to beat inflation.

Mr. Simonds said labor unions are saying to their members that they must protect themselves against inflation and that they had accepted the advice.

"And if we have employers in this country who refuse to recognize the plight of the worker who is not protected by a cost-of-living clause in his agreement or a worker who is tied to a long-term agreement, then those employers, in failing to face up to their responsibility, are going to be in trouble—and well they should be."

Mr. Simonds said domestic action by the government to fight inflation should include tax cuts for those in lower income groups, pension adjustments based on price increases in food and housing rather than on the full consumer price index, mortgage money available at eight per cent interest and cuts in government spending on "bureaucratic expansion."

"What I am saying is that the government of this country had better heed what we are saying," Mr. Simonds said.

"We want action and we want it now.

"If the prime minister and his government think that Canadian workers are going to placidly line up in front of soup kitchens again as they did in 1929 and 1930, then they are in for one hell of a surprise."

City Already Past Road Death Record

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

This year could be the worst ever for traffic fatalities in the greater Victoria area leading to calls for a heavy enforcement program.

Already 35 people have died in road mishaps, four more than in all of 1973.

Police officials fear the number will climb even higher as the dark nights of winter close in, a time generally fraught with serious motor vehicle accidents.

Only Oak Bay has been fatality free — an enviable record that dates back to July, 1970.

In all other muncipalities the number of fatalities has either reached or exceeded the 1973 figures.

Saanich has had 10 fatalities so far, up two for the whole of last year. Sidney, with five, is also up two.

Victoria, with nine, Colwood, with seven, Sooke, with two, and Esquimalt and Central Saanich each with one, are all the same as 1973 year-end tallies in their respective areas.

Traffic experts can offer no definitive explanation for the startling increase in road deaths.

However, police officials interviewed Tuesday clearly felt there has been a deterioration in the respect for safe driving in recent years.

They cited public apathy, indifference and a total disdain for traffic regulations as principle factors in the decline.

The laws are not just being infringed either, they are being "flagrantly abused" and "wilfully disobeyed," Colwood RCMP Cpl. Lance Bailey said.

"A voluntary compliance of the laws just doesn't occur," he said.

A traffic expert with 14 years experience, Bailey considers the major causes of accidents, speeding and following too close.

But traffic deaths nearly always show alcohol involved somewhere, he said. There is evidence of alcohol in six of this year's seven fatalities in the Colwood area.

The deaths in Saanich have perplexed police officials. All have occurred in good weather, on dry roads, under what could be considered ideal driving conditions.

How do they happen then?

The majority can be attributed to excessive speed, Insp. Ted Owens said.

Owens, who has just returned from a motor trip to Alberta, said he sees "more crazy things happening on the roads in Victoria than any of the other places I visited."

"We seem to have a lackadaisical type of driver here. The people just don't seem to

An avalanche of driver's licence suspensions is creating serious problems for the B.C. Motor Vehicle branch.

"We just can't cope with the workload," Adolphe Repasse, supervisor of driver safety and improvement said in an interview Tuesday. "The situation is really getting out of hand.

"Unless we make some drastic changes I don't know what we are going to do.

"I could stand at least 10 additional staff to cope with the suspension picture we have now."

Some suspensions are taking as long as a year to process, he said. The present backlog runs between 2,000 and 3,000.

"We have files piled up around us like cord wood.

"It's a very serious situation. If we want to keep on with the program we are going to have to get more staff."

Repasse isn't the only one disturbed by the situation. Saanich police Insp. Ted Owens had some hard hitting comments of his own.

"Suspension has become a joke," he said. "We've had people with 60 and 70 demerit points and still driving. They just laugh at us.

"A senior RCMP official told me of a person in Vancouver who had 60 demerit points and was bragging about it.

"Yet nothing was happening to him.

"Unless people know there is action at the end of the line . . . the penalty of suspension is entirely lost."

At present the driver's licence suspension division has a staff of 28 typists, clerks and analysts. In addition there are 70 examiners handling outside interviews around the province.

Repasse estimated his staff will process about 250,000 records of convictions and traffic violation reports as well as more than 20,000 notices of intent and actual suspensions this year.

The figures have been soaring each year.

He said besides the critical staff shortage part of the problem was the Motor Vehicle Act which details how suspensions must be processed.

Suspensions may be handed down by a judge and they take effect immediately.

However if the judge doesn't suspend — and relatively few do according to Repasse — then it's up to the Motor Vehicle Branch.

Only on drinking driving offences is suspension mandatory — one month for first offenders, six months for repeaters.

"But," said Repasse, "just because it's mandatory doesn't mean it is automatic."

It can take from three weeks to three months before the suspension order is finally made, and in that time the convicted drinking driver can drive with impunity.

The delays start at the police station, he said. By law

CALLEY

Judge Frees Calley

Times News Services

COLUMBUS, Ga. — A judge, citing a recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling dealing with former president Nixon and the Watergate tapes, today overturned the My Lai murder conviction of former army Lieut. William Calley.

He ordered Calley freed immediately.

Judge J. Robert Elliott overturned Calley's conviction for the murder of 22 civilians in the hamlet of My Lai on the specific grounds of massive pretrial publicity, denial of Calley's rights to confront unfriendly witnesses and improperly-drawn charges.

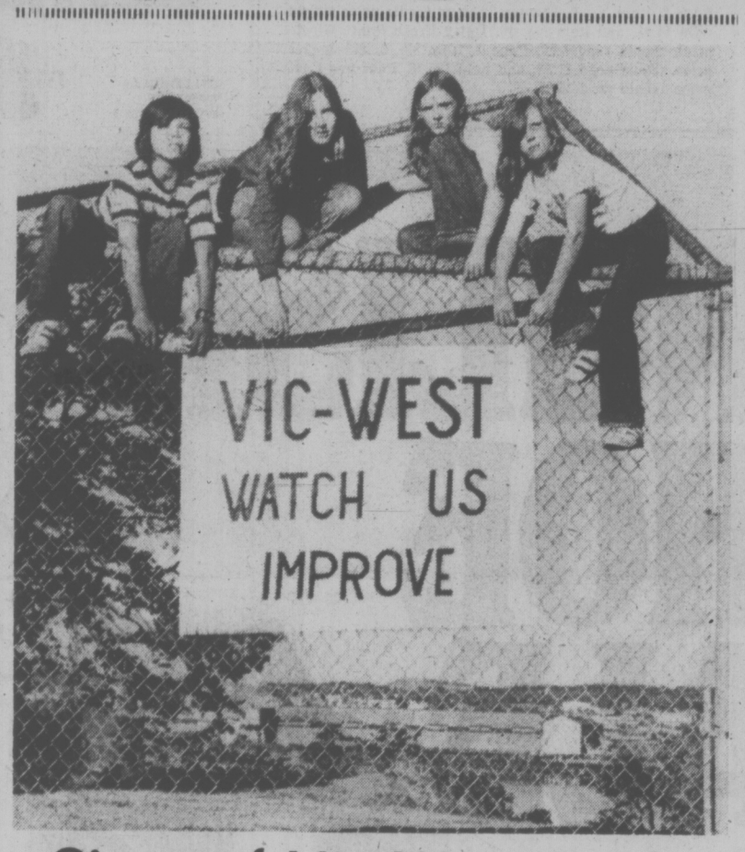
But Elliott said the Supreme Court, in ruling on the Watergate tapes, had, in effect, decided the Calley affair.

He noted that the court held that Nixon had to turn over the Watergate tapes, but that a committee of the House of Representatives that investigated the My Lai case had refused to turn over its transcript to Calley's defence lawyers.

Army attorneys, however, are expected to appeal the order immediately, and Elliott's ruling does not necessarily mean that Calley will be set free.

Calley is being held at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., where he was taken after the army succeeded in having his bail revoked. Elliott earlier had set Calley free on bail after Calley took his case to the civilian courts, having exhausted his appeals before military tribunals.

Calley was sentenced to life imprisonment March 29, 1971, by a court-martial board. His sentence was reduced to 20 years by a military appeals board and then to 10 by Army Secretary Howard Callaway.



Signs of Vic West Pride

In an effort to promote community pride, Vic West is erecting "Vic West — Watch Us Improve" signs on all roads leading into the community.

The idea came out of the recent survey taken in conjunction with the Neighborhood Improvement Program. Vic West and James Bay are to share in $2 million in funds for improvement programs.

The idea was mentioned in August and this month the signs began appearing. Helping to erect this sign are from left: Trevor Tweedie, and Elaine, Gemma and Steven Agney.

Well, Uh . . . There's, Um . . . and Then

By ANDRE OUIMET
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Urban Affairs Minister Barney Danson was stumped Tuesday at a news conference when asked to name a specific example of imaginative Canadian housing ideas he had referred to earlier.

The conference was held on the subject of Habitat, a United Nations conference on housing to be held in Vancouver in 1976, and Danson had emphasized that Canada already had examples of the type of housing ideas which would be discussed at Habitat.

"I'm on the spot," Danson admitted and deftly passed the question to his executive assistant, who snapped up to attention, and after a moment's hesitation suggested that an Urban Affairs official, sitting among the press people, could best answer.

"There are, unquestionably, a number of existing imaginative projects on housing in Canada," the official began, "but I would like a colleague of mine here to tell us of a particular project he has been working on himself."

The colleague reluctantly got up, cracked that "the buck stops here," and proceeded to describe what Canada had to offer in the way of imaginative housing ideas.

Project "Winter Warmth," he began, had evolved after studies by the Uban Affairs department had shown it would be difficult to move natives living in Northern settlements "to a middle-class house in middle class Toronto."

"The imaginative answer was to upgrade housing in the North—taking the Indian or Eskimo's home and providing it with a stove and insulation."

No other "imaginative" ideas were offered as examples of Canadian ingenuity and the news conference moved on to other subjects.

Mounties 'Infiltrated'

TORONTO (CP) — The RCMP fears that organized crime has infiltrated its security division, according to the Toronto Star.

In a copyright story from Ottawa, the newspaper quotes reliable sources as saying that this fear, plus reference to a clandestine operation by agents of United States military intelligence in Montreal, dominates a mass of top-secret information that may become public this week.

The Star says the sources claim the information is potentially dangerous to Canada and they are astonished that it may become public.

The documents are those filed with the federal Court of Appeal in a case involving an appeal by two former RCMP security agents against their dismissal last December. The court has ruled that the documents in the case of Don McCleery and Gilles Brunet are to be made available as evidence in the case.

The Star says that the best information available indicates evidence shortly to be released will show:

—The RCMP has grave fears that it has been infiltrated and perhaps used by organized crime, which in turn is moving into legitimate fields of business and industry as it has in the U.S.

—At least two officers of U.S. Military Intelligence were in Canada for a period of months, conducting clandestine operations on behalf of Washington with at least the tacit approval of the RCMP.

—Illegal wiretaps are used by the RCMP as a matter of course, and these infringe on a broad sector of society normally considered immune to invasions of privacy in a free society.

Nixon Has Lung Clot

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Richard Nixon has a blood clot in his right lung "which is a potentially dangerous situation," his doctor said today.

Dr. John C. Lungren said that the clot, which moved through blood vessels from Nixon's leg, was found through tests conducted by a specialist in nuclear medicine.

There was a good chance for Nixon to recover, but it would take some time, he added.

He revealed that he had suspected the lung clot since Sept. 11 when he visited Nixon while he was staying at the home of U.S. ambassador to Britain, Walter Annenberg, in Palm Springs.

Lungren said Nixon probably would be hospitalized at least until the middle or end of next week.

Exporter Bid for Eggs, CEMA Let Them Rot

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto exporter said Tuesday his order for 50 million eggs was rejected in April by the Canadian Egg Marketing Agency (CEMA) because the price offered was too low.

Andrew Tuval, president of Rexim International Ltd., a food broker, said he had the order, from one of Austria's largest food importers, signed in the Canadian Embassy in Vienna with the Canadian Trade Commission there as witnesses.

Tuval said the CEMA need not have wasted any of the 28 million eggs recently found rotting in storage areas if it had pushed European exports.

"But I saw no evidence the egg agency was interested."

Canadian eggs, he said, have better flavor, color and sanitary conditions than the East European eggs usually sold in Austria, which is a major importer of eggs. If the price had been right, a good market could have been developed, he added.

Rexim was developing the Austrian market with the help of the Ontario Egg Producers Marketing Board, with Rexim working on commission. Experimental air shipments of eggs to Vienna were started in late 1973 with the Ontario board's help.

But when the national egg surplus began to mount last spring, CEMA took over export responsibilities from the provincial boards along with responsibility for disposing of the surplus.

"We bowed out and turned Mr. Tuval and his order over to CEMA," Brian Ellsworth, manager of the Ontario board, said.

Rexim's offer to CEMA "was in the low range," recalled Henry Pauls, director of market development for the Ontario food council, a branch of the agriculture department.

"But the point is that every offer should have been looked

Marguerite's Last Trip

Victorians who want to take a last "sentimental journey" aboard the doomed Princess Marguerite will have their final chance to do so on Saturday, when the CP vessel makes its last full run to Seattle and back.

Sunday's sailing will be a charter trip and the final sailing Monday will be strictly one-way, from Seattle to Victoria.

Israeli Planes Pound Lebanon

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli jets bombed and strafed Palestinian targets in southern Lebanon today less than seven hours before the start of Yom Kippur, holiest day of the Jewish calendar and anniversary of the 1973 Arab-Israeli war. Reports from Sidon, Lebanon, said no Palestinian guerrillas were killed or wounded in the raids, which followed similar attacks Tuesday, but plantations were destroyed and woods set ablaze.

Free Enterprise Rallies Socreds

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

HARRISON HOT SPRINGS — Social Credit delegates left their policy think-tank Tuesday with a hefty bundle of resolutions re-affirming their allegiance to free enterprise in B.C.

Sixteen policy workshops had finished their deliberations in the morning and the remainder of the day was spent in a lengthy recital of the 63 pages of resolutions hammered out at the two-day session.

As the 200 delegates gathered to hear the results of their work, Socred leader Bill Bennett reminded them the resolutions are only one step in the process which will lead to a new Social Credit policy at the annual convention in Vancouver this November.

The workshop papers, prepared with the help of invited experts in various fields, will now go back to constituency associations for discussion in preparation for the November gathering.

But despite Bennett's cautioning, the delegates displayed obvious confidence in the success of their recommendations.

Their confidence and exuberance was heightened when party president Grace McCarthy read a telegram on the results of the first Socred door-knocking campaign in Cowichan-Malahat consitutency.

"Out of 60 homes visited, 46

Just Too Many Volunteers

Police today had to turn away volunteers wanting to join in the search for two-year-old Yehudi Prior, lost in rugged terrain 10 miles south of Shawnigan Lake Monday.

"We don't want to end up having to hunt for volunteers who get lost in the bush," an RCMP spokesman said.

The search has entered its second day for the boy, only child of William and Ann Prior, both in their early 20s.

The boy apparently wandered off while the couple was picking berries about half a mile from their home, a rough cabin situated on land owned by MacMillan and Bloedel in a remote area north and west of the Port Renfrew Road. A logging road is the only access to the site.

RCMP in Shawnigan Lake said Prior notified them at 5 p.m. Monday that his son had disappeared about two hours earlier but thought he could find him himself.

"He wondered if someone — loggers or trail-bike riders — had reported seeing the child," the police spokesman said.

"We didn't hear from him again until the next morning when he came into our office to request assistance in a search."

About 20 searchers, including police and members of the Duncan volunteer search and rescue group combed a one square mile area Tuesday where the boy was last seen.

A tracking dog was brought in from Nanaimo Tuesday afternoon but failed to pick up any scent.

The search resumed at dawn today.

VANDALS HIT BEN GINTER

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Vandals did an estimated $50,000 damage to the home of industrialist Ben Ginter during the weekend.

A police spokesman said the size of footprints indicated children were responsible.

Every room in the 9,000-square-foot mansion was ransacked, windows were smashed and upholstery was slashed.
